Cairo Parley With Turkish President Is Reported

Roosevelt, Churchill Said to Have Met With Inonu After Talks With Stalin

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—A German news agency said today that the Turkish President, Ismet Inonu, conferred with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill in Cairo yesterday after the momentous Iran meeting of the heads of the American and British governments with Premier Marshal Stalin.

In a broadcast quoting dispatches from Ankara, the Nazi news agency, Transocean, which previously had reported Inonu journeying to Cairo for the meeting, said a communique was not expected before Wednesday or Thursday, "after the return of the Turkish statesman."

The Berlin radio also reported that Emir Mansur, son of King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, and Emir Fahad, nephew of the King, arrived in Cairo Saturday. The broadcast said it was generally "expected they will take part in some Cairo conference."

After the conferences at Cairo and Teheran which Roosevelt and Churchill had with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Stalin, a multi-front assault seemed assured. All reports on these conferences indicated that the Allied leaders laid the basis of a new world without war and were casting anxious eyes at Turkey.

A promise of freedom for Europe more precise even than the Atlantic Charter was expected soon in the official declaration on the outcome of the American-British-Soviet conferences. British newspapers said the communique would disclose an agreement for attacks on Hitler's "Fortress Europe" from the east, west and south.

Disclosure that their talks with Chiang took place in the Mena Hotel suggested that Roosevelt and Churchill might have stopped there again on their trip from Teheran and then started home.

The German news agency DNB said it was not unusual for Inonu to meet Roosevelt, since the American President happened to be so near Turkey and it added that no change in Turkish foreign policy was expected.

May Get Bases in Turkey

But the Germans said Inonu was accompanied by Numan Menemencioglu, Turkish Foreign Minister, and the general secretary of the Turkish Foreign Ministry.

Turkey's eventual entry into the war—thereby affording the Allies new air and sea bases for operations in the Black Sea—was thought by some to have been increasingly possible since Menemencioglu conferred with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden after the latter's conference in Moscow with United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov.

Since the Moscow conference cleared the political field for the big three meeting at Teheran, the British Foreign Office presumably was able to give the Turks any reassurances regarding their neighbor Russia that the Turks may have sought. It may equally be assumed that the British Foreign Office was able to present Russia's attitude toward Turkey and inform Inonu of considerations involved in any drive against Germany from the southeast.

Envoys Reported Back

Significant, perhaps, was the German-controlled Paris radio's report that the Turkish Ambassador to Germany had returned to Berlin from Turkey, where he went for consultations while the Vichy radio quoted Franz von Papen, Nazi Ambassador to Turkey, as saying on his arrival at Istanbul from Berlin that "Germany is anxious to continue its friendly collaboration

'Big 3' Parley Report To Be Released Today

The world will hear at 1 p. m. today an official version of what Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin decided at Teheran, in ancient Iran.

The official report of the conference will be made public then.

Tax Framers Call In Murray, Agency Chiefs

Seek Their Advice As Drive Is Made To Close Hearings

By Francis J. Kelly
Associated Press Staff Writer

Determined to complete public hearings on the still-battered $2,140,000,000 tax increase bill by tonight, the Senate Finance Committee has summoned a group of departmental officials for advice on House-approved amendments affecting the renegotiation of war contracts.

Also to be heard are Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and opponents of the Maybank amendment which would suspend for the duration the Federal tax of 10 cents a pound on colored margarine.

Protest Procession

In six days of hearings which started last Monday scarcely a voice was raised in support of new or higher taxes, but a procession of lawyers, lobbyists and businessmen filed before the committee to protest one phase or another of the bill approved by the House.

Declaring the measure full of "bad features," acting Chairman Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts predicted it would be ripped to tatters either within the committee or on the Senate floor, for a net result of little or no more revenue than could be expected under present laws.

The only way Walsh saw to realize a major share of the $10,500,000,000 asked by the Treasury was to tap sources of revenue not affected by the House bill. He had no specific suggestions, but Senator Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania put in a plug for a war bond lottery plan.

Headed for Ashcan

A proposed $166,000,000 postal rate increase seemed headed for the ashcan because of Postmaster General Walker's opposition. Men in the jewelry, fur, light bulb, luggage, cosmetic, telephone, picture show, bowling alley and cabaret businesses have registered lusty protests against new or increased excise taxes on their products. Total projected excise boosts aggregated $1,201,700,000.

Bombers Raid Mili and Nauru In Mid-Pacific

By the Associated Press

Army Liberator bombers, ranging through the Central Pacific, raided Mili Atoll in the Japanese-held Marshalls and Nauru Island yesterday, the Navy reported last night.

Fifty tons of bombs were dropped on Mili, starting several fires and destroying an enemy medium bomber on the ground, the Navy quoted Admiral Chester W. Nimitz as reporting from Pearl Harbor headquarters. Mili is about 450 miles northwest of newly-won Tarawa.

In the attack on Nauru, about 700 miles southwest of Tarawa, Liberators set fire to an oil dump.

No Air Opposition

There was no enemy aerial opposition in either action, although five of our craft were damaged by anti-aircraft fire in the Mili raid and one at Nauru. Three enemy planes fled as the Liberators arrived at Nauru.

Earlier, the Navy reported that the outclassed Japanese airforce had struck back at U. S. airbases on Tarawa, but inflicted only minor damage.

United States Liberators made repeated raids on the heretofore untouched Japanese seaplane base in the Kapingamarangi Atoll, 1200 miles farther west, and only 400 miles from Truk.

Both actions were revealed by Pacific fleet headquarters.

Nine Japanese planes bombed the blood-bathed Tarawa field Friday night "causing minor damage" and wounding three men and a lone enemy ship dropped four small bombs at Makin Saturday, the Navy said in a communique.

400 Miles From Truk

In contrast, three strikes by Liberators all scored heavily on Hare Island in the Kapingamarangi Atoll, only 400 miles south by east of the Japanese stronghold of Truk and 800 miles northwest of Guadalcanal in the Solomons. A fleet spokesman said the base was badly crippled. Hare Island was used by the Japanese as a stepping stone from Truk to Rabaul, New Britain, hinge of its southern defenses now threatened by the Allies from the Solomons and New Guinea.

A Liberator on reconnaissance over the Marshalls shot down one Zero and damaged two others when seven Japanese planes intercepted

Men Ransack House Seeking Rumored Cache of Fortune

Leroy L. Searles, 57-year-old retired draftsman, yesterday was attacked by two men at his home, bound with his necktie and a wire radio aerial and robbed of $224 after his assailants tore up floor boards and bathroom tiles apparently seeking additional hidden money.

The assault took place about 5:30 p. m. as Searles entered a side door at his home, 537 15th st. se. He lived alone.

Searles reported the thugs pushed him into the house in front of them, stripped off his necktie and bound his ankles with it and then secured his wrists behind his back with the aerial wire. Throwing him to the floor, they kicked him in the head and abdomen, he told police.

One of the men, about 35, was drunk, Searles reported, adding that they systematically ransacked every room in the house after depositing him on the living room floor.

They ripped up floor boards in the kitchen and bedrooms and even pulled down tiles lining the bathroom wall. They knifed open mattresses and pillows, he said.

Searles, left ungagged, screamed for more than 30 minutes after the men departed before attracting the attention of a neighbor, Paul Hawkes, 559½ 15th st. se. The latter released him and notified police.

Residents of the area attributed the attack to neighborhood gossip that the victim had a fortune cached in his home. They said he has an income from several pieces of real estate.

Police flashed a broadcast for the two thugs describing them as follows: No. 1, 35, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing about 150 pounds and wearing a gray hat and top coat; No. 2, 30 years, 185 pounds, known as John. The clothes of both men were covered with feathers, the lookout said.

Russians Overrun Enemy Bastions In Plunge to Take Key Railway Cities

London, Monday, Dec. 6 (AP).—Red army troops fought to compress the German defense lines upon the approaches to the Gomel region rail hubs of Zhlobin and Rogachev yesterday, and smashed forward northwest of Propoisk in a drive menacing Mogilev, Moscow announced early today.

Fighting in rain, mud, fog and cold, the Russians in their plunge in the Propoisk region overran three Nazi bulwarks, the broadcast said. Mogilev is one of the main remaining rail and defense centers held by the Germans in White Russia. Propoisk is approximately 70 miles north of Gomel and 40 miles southeast of Mogilev.

Moscow dispatches declared that Gen. Constantine Rokossovsky's troops had penetrated deep into the Germans' strong defense line virtually from one end of White Russia to the other.

Push On Through Mud

The communique said Russian troops, despite clinging Ukraine mud, were continuing their push west and southwest of Kremenchug, and had captured three Nazi strongpoints after stubborn fighting.

German troops, continuing their infantry and tank attacks against the Russians' Dnieper River bridgehead in the Cherkasy area, were repulsed, the bulletin said. By expanding their holding below Kremenchug westward, the Russians apparently are attempting to relieve the pressure on the Cherkasy bridgehead.

The communique also contained a belated disclosure of the landing of German sea-borne forces a few days ago at the mouth of the Dnieper River—a landing which it said was completely wiped out by Soviet counterattacks.

700 Germans Killed

German losses in this operation were declared to total 700 dead, and the Russians took 500 prisoners. The Nazi landings were made on Kindurinskaya Kosa, and the enemy captured Vordtadt and Pokrovskey Khutara before the Soviet counterblows developed.

The Soviet monitor and the British Ministry of Information both recorded reports that battles were being fought on the approaches to Zhlobin, the important junction of the Leningrad-Odessa and Gomel-Minsk railways. The Russians last were reported eight miles away on a drive from the southeast up the Gomel rail line.

The Russians were pictured in the German communique as having launched fierce new attacks in the Crimea from their bridgehead northeast of Kerch. The Germans also said Rumanian troops attacked the Soviet bridgehead south of Kerch and "penetrated the enemy (Red army) positions and made a dash for the coast." No mention was made by the Russians of a Crimean operation.

Heavy Fighting Reported

The Germans reported heavy fighting continuing in the Cherkasy area, but asserted the Soviet offensive west of Smolensk toward Orsha had been halted. The Russians did not report a Smolensk area offensive.

Critique of Campaign

Yanks' Only Armored Division Spread Too Thin in Tunisia

By the Associated Press

The Army, in a critique of its campaign in Tunisia, says that the outstanding lesson learned there came from "failure to use the armored division in sufficient strength or in concentrated mass."

The one armored division that participated in the campaign "was not employed as a unit until the last phases of the battles for Mateur and Bizerte," observed the critique, adding that before that time the armor arrived at battle fronts "piecemeal and was used piecemeal throughout."

The report, however, agrees that mass action was precluded by the necessity of spreading the armored division over a wide front because it was the only force available with sufficient mobility and power to meet sudden thrusts over a long and thinly held line.

The observations on the Tunisian campaign are contained in a 70-page digest of reports and recommendations by various commanders in the campaign, until now circulated through Army circles as a confidential document.

While the report praised, it also pointed out errors in the United States' first big land operation in this war.

"Scouting and patrolling proved to be one of the most serious deficiencies in the operations of American infantry in Tunisia," the critique said. "Patrol activity was not sufficiently aggressive and at times failure in effective scouting operations resulted in patrols being am-

6 U-Boats Sunk In 8 Days; New Drive Smashed

3 Convoys Go Through Unscathed by Prowling Atlantic 'Wolf Packs'

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—Six German submarines were destroyed in the Atlantic in eight days by U. S. naval and RAF coastal command planes smashing a renewed outbreak of U-boat warfare, the Air Ministry announced today.

In all, 15 attacks were made on U-boat wolf packs seeking to attack three Atlantic convoys recently, a communique declared, and one RAF Liberator was lost.

The convoys were brought safely to port, and so intense was the battle against two large U-boat packs that not a single torpedo was fired against the merchantmen.

Three Sunk on Sixth Day

Only bad weather saved the U-boats from further losses, the Air Ministry said.

Three subs fell victim on the sixth day, all being sent down by Liberators' depth-bombs.

In each of the six confirmed sinkings, wreckage and bodies were seen afterward on the surface, and a total of 80 to 90 survivors were seen following some of the successful attacks. Results were not observed in the other nine attacks.

No Word From One Plane

On the first of the eight days, the communique said, three submarines were attacked by planes from Iceland escorting convoys. No U-boats were seen near the convoys themselves, but they were found by aircraft sweeping the approaches.

On the second day, Hudsons and Venturas of the American Navy swept the neighborhood near the convoys, and a Hudson made one attack, with unobservable results. Later a Ventura straddled a surfaced U-boat with depth charges, and it sank by the bows, with 30 survivors left in the water. That was the first confirmed sinking.

A Liberator on the same day exploded depth charges under another U-boat, and it went down stern first, leaving 20 to 25 crewmen afloat. Another Liberator, led by Wing Commander R. M. Longmore, signaled that it was attacking a submarine. But no further word ever was heard from the plane.

'Forts' Batter Objectives In Nazi France

11 Bombers Are Lost In Downing Same Number of Fighters

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—American and British air might turned from its methodical destruction of German cities today to deliver a smashing blow against enemy targets in occupied France.

U. S. heavy and medium bombers and fighters took a leading part in the daylight bombardment assaults which cost the Eighth Air Force 11 heavy bombers against the destruction of 11 Nazi fighters.

Today was the first time in more than two months that the Fortresses have concentrated on targets in France. On September 26, they hit a Nazi fighter repair base near Rheims. The targets today were not immediately specified.

Other Offensive Sweeps

Thunderbolt and Lightning fighter planes supported the Flying Fortresses, the Eighth Air Force announced, while RAF, Canadian and Allied fighters provided cover for U. S. Marauders and RAF fighter-bombers attacking military objectives in northern France.

Other fighters made offensive sweeps over Nazi territory. One fighter was lost during the day's operations.

The daylight assaults were a sequel to Mosquito attacks on targets in western Germany last night and mine-laying activities by other RAF planes. One plane was lost by the minelayers.

Allied warplanes now are almost continuously over Europe, and last week not 24 hours passed without bombs falling on German soil.

The weakening of the German air force even in purely defensive operations was demonstrated clearly by its inability to defend Leipzig when British heavy bombers feinted at Berlin Friday night and then banked to smother Leipzig with 1500 tons of bombs.

Packed Over Berlin

Nazi fighters were packed over Berlin and there were not enough left to protect Leipzig when the bombers suddenly changed their course and plastered the vital industrial and railway center, virtually unopposed in the air. Fires raged uncontrolled in Leipzig yesterday, indicating much of its air raid protection services had been transferred to Berlin during the two weeks the capital was smashed

5th Army Storms Key Strongholds Upon Fortified Mount Maggiore

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Dec. 5 (AP).—American infantry has stormed key strongholds on heavily fortified Mount Maggiore, 1500-foot bastion on the southwestern flank of the Mignano Pass to Rome, in the blazing, all-out battle into which the Germans have thrown more than nine divisions to hold their winter line, Allied headquarters announced today.

On either end of the line both the American Fifth Army and the famous British Eighth have cast their full power into the offensive for the first time since the invasion of Italy.

British troops with the Fifth have captured an important ridge, 2800-foot Monte Camino, also on the southern flank of the road from Mignano to Rome.

(Three of the most formidable heights in the Mount Camino area now are in Allied hands, the Algiers United Nations radio said.

San Vito Falls

On the hard-fought Adriatic flank the Eighth Army captured San Vito, 16 miles below the strategic port of Pescara, but so tough was German resistance that the men of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery were forced to give up newly captured Orsogna to a determined, tank-led counterattack.

Official reports said the fighting for the peaks came the closest to resembling World War I conflicts, such as Verdun, of any engagements in this war.

Reinforcements reached Italy for Canadian forces. A delayed dispatch from an Allied-held Italian port said headquarters personnel of a Canadian armored unit, tankmen and motorized troops had landed after an uneventful voyage from Britain.

A communique from the headquarters of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, General Eisenhower's deputy commander in chief, described the losses of the German Tenth Army as "heavy."

"We have achieved very important local successes," said a headquarters spokesman. "In some places on the mountains the Germans had dug into solid rock to a depth of 8 feet and had to be driven out in hand-to-hand combat."

In the third day of the Fifth Army's smashing attack, yesterday, the battle developed into an almost entirely infantry-artillery affair as rain cut Allied air activity to a minimum.

Jap Defenders Of New Guinea Base Repulsed 3 Times

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters (Monday), Dec. 6 (AP).—The Japanese have counterattacked three times in defense of their jungle strong point of Wareo on northeastern New Guinea, but were repulsed each time.

The Australians used artillery to repel the attacks and bombers supported our continuing advances.

Allied bombers cascaded 95 tons of bombs on Japanese positions south of American beachheads at Empress Augusta Bay on Bougainville Island, destroying a bridge and 40 buildings. The Japanese seaplane base at Kieta on the east coast of Bougainville also was raided.

Twenty-five enemy torpedo and dive bombers raided shipping at Empress Augusta Bay. Three were shot down for certain and three more probably.

Cape Gloucester on New Britain took a 63-ton bombing which started fires and silenced guns. Our heavy bombers possibly damaged an 8000-ton transport vessel and left a 1500-ton cargo ship out of control in the Bismarck Sea.

Redskins Beaten By Giants, 14 to 10; Packers Triumph

Rookie Bill Paschal's 53-yard touchdown run for the New York Giants in the closing quarter of their game with the Redskins at New York yesterday tossed the Indians to their second defeat in a row. Final score was 14-10.

Thus, if the Giants win their game here next Sunday they will tie the 'Skins for first place in the Eastern Division. The Green Bay Packers, meanwhile, knocked the Phil-Pitt Eagles from their possible tie perch by defeating them, 38-28, on a fourth-period rally by Don Hutson.

Progress Reported in Effort To Delay Subsidy Vote 60 Days

While plans were laid yesterday for a "Housewives' Day" at the Capitol in support of food subsidies, reports spread that Administration forces were making some progress in an effort to postpone for 60 days a Senate vote on banning further use of subsidies to hold down living costs.

At the same time, proponents of a compromise which would swing the Senate Banking and Currency Committee in favor of a limited number of subsidies, were hopeful of favorable action.

A House-approved bill that would halt subsidies January 1, is the topic of Senate hearings, and a bipartisan Senate majority apparently is lined up in favor of it. However, Administration leaders were reported by the Associated Press to be appealing to Democratic colleagues to agree to a postponement of a Senate vote until February, at least, while a Democratic caucus of the Senate would determine what action should be taken.

The bill carrying the subsidy ban is primarily intended to extend the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation beyond January 1, and separate action would have to be taken to accomplish that purpose.

Senator Aiken (Republican) of Vermont was quoted by the Associated Press as saying he and others of like views would not accept any proposal to continue the life of the CCC for even 60 days without the anti-subsidy clause.

"That's no compromise," he declared. "It seems as though every time the White House wants to compromise with the farmers, it wants to compromise the White House way. I think there is even a deliberate attempt to hold up the price of food in order to try to get this subsidy proposal across."

On the other hand, Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, an Administration supporter of

Tiny Infant Holds Her Own

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Little Mary Ann Maceli—so tiny she could be held in the palm of an adult's hand—was accorded an 85 per cent chance of survival today as she passed the ninth day of her life in a borrowed incubator at a Brooklyn Hospital.

Her doctor, Michael DiStesano, said the child, who weighed only 1 pound 10½ ounces at birth, now was taking a greater quantity of less-diluted milk.

"This is a very good sign," he said. "And since she has lived through the ninth day, I would say she has an 85 per cent chance of survival."

75 Injured as Gasoline Truck Blows Up in Midst of Crowd

Fort Myers, Fla., Dec. 5 (AP).—A truck loaded with 5000 gallons of aviation gasoline exploded here today, injuring 75 persons who had been drawn to the scene when the vehicle and another truck collided.

Eleven persons were being treated tonight at Lee Memorial Hospital, while the rest were dismissed after being treated for varying degrees of burns.

Great sheets of flame belched from the truck and sprayed over the crowd.

Many suffered shock and severe burns.

One patient was a 14-month-old baby who was burned as he rested in the arms of his aunt, Mrs. Stella Williams.

The blast ripped out all the city's communication lines. Witnesses said a sheet of flame 400 feet high gushed from the truck and blazing oil fell over a wide area.

Soldiers from nearby Buckingham Air Field were rushed to the scene to help remove the injured.

One soldier, Sergt. Lucian H. Rogers, 30, was credited with saving the life of the driver of the gasoline truck. Brief seconds before the explosion occurred, Rogers lifted the driver out of the cab of the truck. The explosion burned Rogers but not severely.

The driver of the second truck involved escaped injury.

Bolivia Joins In War on Axis

Buenos Aires, Dec. 5 (INS).—Another South American nation, Bolivia, today declared war on the Axis. A dispatch from La Paz, Bolivian capital, said President Enrique Penaranda had decreed that a state of war now exists between Bolivia and the Axis.

The President's decree followed a recent congressional vote whereby Bolivia decided to adhere to the United Nations pact.

Crew Saves Villagers as Bomber Falls

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—A Flying Fortress loaded with 6000 pounds of bombs crashed and exploded in the middle of the little Northhamptonshire village of Deenethorpe early today, but the alertness of its crew—who reached ground by parachute—saved the lives of all the 150 inhabitants.

Almost as soon as the big plane struck the ground and burst into flames the crewmen were running from cottage to cottage beating on the doors and shouting "get out into the fields. Our bombs may go off any second."

Most of the villagers leaped from bed, grabbed a few clothes and raced to the fields.

Ten minutes later the aircraft exploded, damaging all of the 30-odd houses. There were only three civilian casualties.

The sound of the explosion was heard 10 miles away.

Calcutta Raided by Day

Calcutta, India, Dec. 5 (AP).—Japanese planes, making their first daylight raid on Calcutta, scattered bombs today, starting a few fires which were quickly extinguished, and causing some casualties.

The raiders flew so high they could be glimpsed only briefly. There have been seven previous raids on Calcutta, but all were at night.

Japs Claim U. S. Losses

Berlin, broadcasting flamboyant Tokyo claims, said yesterday the United States Navy had lost 55 ships, including aircraft carriers, battleships and cruisers, and 592 airplanes in Solomons waters from October 27 "until the day of the sixth air battle of Bougainville on December 3."

An aircraft carrier, a battleship or heavy cruiser and a heavy cruiser were sunk in the sixth encounter, the Japanese claimed. Seventeen ships sank immediately after being hit, the Nipponese claimed, including two large aircraft carriers and two ordinary carriers.

Other ships sunk, Tokyo claimed, included four battleships and four aircraft carriers. Among vessels damaged, Tokyo added, were three battleships and three aircraft carriers. Among vessels damaged, Tokyo added, were three battleships and three aircraft carriers.

Japanese losses in the same period were listed as two destroyers sunk, two cruisers "slightly damaged," and 130 planes missing.

Army of 50,000 Reported Training In Mountain Camp

Barcelona, Spain, Dec. 5 (AP).—German forces retreating before Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army's drive up the Adriatic Coast face a rear threat from an Italian army estimated at 50,000 strong gathered in the mountains of Abruzzi.

This army of Premier Pietro Badoglio, which retired into the Gran Sasso and Morrone Mountains just south of the Pescara Valley, has been steadily reinforced during the last month by youths escaping from German-controlled areas of Italy.

An Argentine citizen who arrived here from Italy only last week said some estimates place the Abruzzi mountain forces at 100,000, of whom about 50,000 are armed, and said they were preparing for action against the Nazi rear guard.

According to reports from the border and this neutral informant, the force includes at least 20,000 soldiers who were in Italy's regular army prior to the armistice.

They have been living on reduced rations and have been conserving their ammunition for just such an opportunity to strike at the Germans as is now presented by the Eighth Army's Sangro River breakthrough.

Most of the newcomers brought their own guns, or have been armed from stores controlled by regular army units.

Some reports say the Italian forces already have made guerilla-type stabs at the Germans, and have cut the trans-peninsular Rome-Pescara Railroad, which is now the Germans' only east-west line south of Ancona.

The Argentine said the Nazis in central Italy, particularly the Rome area, are now "acting as if they are on the eve of a hurried departure from the midst of a people they hate and who hate them."

He said that when the Germans seize goods belonging to Italian citizens they hand out slips of paper falsely promising, "Pagara Badoglio."—Badoglio will pay.

"A squad of Germans under the command of a lieutenant walked into the largest store in Tivoli and in my presene ordered the clerks to pile their truck full of rationed foodstuff and many luxury foods," the Argentine said.

"They gave the excited proprietor merely a slip of paper before they drove off. He showed it to everybody, including me, and it bore only two words, 'pagara Badolgio.'"

Some Districts of Rome were still without water and electricity last week, he reported, as the Germans have repaired only those damaged services they consider to be in essential military zones.

Dysentery is widespread, and other diseases due to bad food and water are increasing rapidly, he said.

by five heavy RAF assaults.

Another evidence of inability of the German air force to stand up under the growing Allied offensive strength was seen in the feat of two Typhoon squadrons which destroyed 11 of about 14 German night bombers which they encountered yesterday over a Dutch airfield.

Nazis Declared "Reeling"

Brig. Gen. Frederick L. Anderson, commander of the United States Eighth Air Force Bomber Command, asserted in a broadcast to American warworkers that his Eighth Air Force had the German air force "reeling" with a record 6400 tons of bombs dropped on Nazi targets during November.

He warned, however, that the Germans were not knocked out yet, confirming to some extent the impressions of George Bengston, a Swedish traveler, returning from bombed areas of Germany, who said many Germans were hypnotized with the Nazi "secret-weapon" propaganda and believed the Germans still had a chance to win the war, despite the crushing air raids and great reverses on the Russian Front.

The Berlin radio said that elephants, lions, tigers, leopards, monkeys, crocodiles and huge snakes were among the inmates in the Berlin Zoo killed during British raids last month.

A dispatch from Stockholm said an indirect effect of the bombing offensive against Germany was beginning to show in various industries. The paper industry was said to have been forced to sidetrack its normal operations to manufacture millions of pasteboard windows to replace shattered panes.

Ministries Quitting Capital

Travelers reaching Stockholm reported the Foreign Office and the Justice Ministry already had been moved to Silesia, leaving only skeleton setups in Berlin and that other ministries also were preparing to evacuate the capital.

Hints of the approaching invasion were given by the Eighth Air Force with the announcement of the development of a new fighter-bomber—P-47 Thunderbolts equipped with bomb-racks for swift stabs over occupied territory.

The new fighter-bombers made an attack against enemy airfields yesterday, bombing the Gilze-Rijen airfield in Holland in much the same manner they will be called upon to do when the invasion is launched.

U. S., Jap Fleets May Slug It Out In '44, Knox Hints

The showdown with the Japanese fleet in an open slugging match may be 1944's big news in the Pacific, Navy Secretary Knox hinted yesterday.

Writing in the Army and Navy Journal issue dedicated to the second anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack, Knox declared:

"It is clearly realized that 1944 might well produce some of the heaviest naval fighting this war has yet seen, for many major elements of the Jap fleet have not yet seen action. . . .

"It is believed that 1944 will find the United States naval service sailing into a number of ports of call on the long voyage to total victory."

Milan Reports Tell Of Ciano's Execution

London (Monday), Dec. 6 (INS).—Swiss advices to London morning papers today quoted reports from Milan as saying that Benito Mussolini's son-in-law, former Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, had been "executed immediately following a trial at Verona on charges of betraying" Italy's former Duce.

This story was not as yet substantiated by other sources.

head into the Dnieper sack, the Russian communique reported that 2620 Nazi officers and men were killed, and of the total 1100 fell in the Kremenchug region and 900 in the Cherkasy area.

In the Cherkasy area also, Red army artillerymen operated with the infantry to smash back the German mechanized blows, and in one part of the battlefield there the Germans failed in an attack involving a regiment of infantry and 50 tanks, losing 400 dead.

The Germans had 26 tanks destroyed or captured in the Ukraine fighting, the bulletin said.

The communique also told of a Soviet unit penetrating into the German rear in the fighting on the soggy ground northwest of Gomel, while other Russian troops advanced in the face of stiff German resistance that included artillery fire and frequent local counter-attacks.

Americans Closing In

The strike at Kapingamarangi indicates how deeply the United States intends to penetrate into the Japanese defenses. The action is isolated, and such strongholds as Truk are still a little out of reach of our Pacific forces. But American arms are slowly closing in.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, said an "unbeatable combination" of all services brought victory in the Gilbert Islands. In a message to the central Pacific forces, made public by the Navy here, Nimitz said:

"The Gilbert Islands were quickly wrested from the enemy because of excellent coordination among all services in careful planning and courageous execution. I am proud of all officers and men who took part. The memory of those who gave their lives will inspire up to apply ourselves with increased diligence to hard future tasks. All forces have helped create and can take pride in the unbeatable combination we have forged."

NAM Demands Reserve Funds For Corporations

The National Association of Manufacturers, in a statement filed with the Senate Finance Committee, urged last night that corporations be allowed to set up reserve funds in the form of special Government bonds to provide for reconversion in the postwar period.

The recommendation was presented by J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the NAM government finance committee and chairman of the board of Universal Pictures Co. of Los Angeles.

with Turkey so that this country can be saved the horrors of war."

German reports said Stalin arrived in Teheran last Sunday and had a lengthy discussion with the Premier, Foreign Minister and Shah of Iran before the Big Three conference opened Monday.

These reports said further that W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador to Russia, attended the conferences, lasting until Thursday morning. Stalin, Churchill and Roosevelt, the reports said, had three special meetings by themselves, each lasting about two hours. Military problems were said in these Nazi reports to have been uppermost in the talks, with the "situation and attitude of Turkey also discussed."

"Measures to ensure the safety of the conferences were entrusted exclusively to the Soviet special police, who enforced a curfew for the civilian population and ordered the suspension of all telephone, telegraph and radio services, even as far as the diplomats were concerned," it was added.

This Nazi news agency added that the Germans have offered no conjecture on the nature of Stalin's reported talks with the Iranians. The Germans said the Americans, British and Russians had drafted a communique and an appeal to the German people to capitulate.

Motor Transport Workers Strike In Southeast

Atlanta, Dec. 5 (AP).—More than 1500 truck drivers and helpers employed by 42 southeastern motor freight transport companies were on strike tonight at Atlanta and Memphis in protest of a delay in final Federal action on a War Labor Board-approved wage hike.

W. T. Archer, business agent for the International Union of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers (AFL), said the proposed wage increase, retroactive to March, 1943, had been approved by WLB, contingent on Office of Price Administration approval. That approval has not yet been granted, he said, and the case is now before Stabilization Director Fred Vinson.

6000 at Meeting Of Jewish Group

New York, Dec. 5.—Six thousand persons from 135 communities in the United States and Canada attended today the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee and heard of its work for relief and rescue of Jews in Europe and the Far East, and plans for their rehabilitation. The committee allotted $10,600,000 in 1943 for this overseas work.

Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, European director of the committee, said assistance was being provided to refugees in Switzerland, Spain, Asiatic Russia and Sweden. He said the committee has enabled 12,000 persons to emigrate to the Western Hemisphere and to Palestine since Pearl Harbor.

Dr. Kindler Conducts In Sports Clothes

Dr. Hans Kindler is the first conductor of a major American symphony orchestra to direct his men while wearing sports clothes. When it came time to present the Colgate concert at Hamilton, N. Y., Saturday night, Dr. Kindler's trunk was missing, and there was only one alternative; to conduct in the clothes he was wearing.

Cairo Dispatch

'Big 3' Accord Reported on War, Peace

Cairo, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Roosevelt-Churchill-Chiang Kai-shek Pacific consultations were held at the Mena House, luxury hotel 5 miles outside Cairo, it was disclosed today.

Residents at Mena House this morning read the Cairo papers carrying the news under Moscow and other date lines that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill had just concluded a conference with Premier Stalin of Russia at Teheran, Iran.

The papers declared that agreement had been reached with Stalin on war strategy and plans for permanent peace. All said an official statement would be made shortly.

Teheran Parley Lasted 4 Days

The extraordinary Teheran conference of the "big three," flanked by their highest military staffs, lasted four days, according to newspaper reports. The Cairo publications said the three began plenary sessions Sunday, November 28, and continued them through last Wednesday.

It was disclosed that President Roosevelt had lived in a villa near the Mena House during the Pacific conference. Most of the plenary sessions of that conference were held in his big living room.

The fact that the Pacific conference was held at Mena House, close by the Sphinx, accentuated the previous designation to this meeting as the "Sphinx Conference."

The 45-room, gray stone house—named for the first ruler of a united Egypt, Mena, whose dynasty dates back to 3200 B. C.—lies near the pyramid of Cheops. More than 50 years old, it is noted for its tropical gardens.

Press Representatives Protest

One Arabic newspaper carried a cartoon of the Sphinx body headed by enigmatic, pipe-smoking Stalin, with Roosevelt, Churchill, and Chiang Kai-shek as satellites.

Meanwhile, a protest signed by virtually every representative of the world press gathered in Cairo was sent to Minister of Information Brendan Bracken in London and Elmer Davis of the OWI in Washington expressing "complete dissatisfaction" with the way "public relations and press facilities of the great power conferences have been managed," and expressing hope that these methods "will not serve as a pattern for press coverage of future conferences."

Sees Terroristic Violence in New Liberation Group

Cairo, Dec. 5 (AP).—King Peter of the Yugoslav government-in-exile violently protested today the formation of a rump government—the Council of National Liberation—inside Yugoslavia by Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) and Mr. Ivan Ribar.

Ribar heads the new rump government, and Tito was made a field marshal and chairman of a new committee for national defense.

Formation of the government was announced yesterday by the Free Yugoslav radio, mouthpiece of the pro-Russian Yugoslav Partisan movement, which said 140 delegates had created a parliament and governing body for the areas already wrested from the Germans.

The Allies, including Russia, have recognized King Peter's exiled government which has headquarters here. The provisional regime inside Yugoslavia was established in opposition to it.

Peter declared this was "a movement of terroristic violence," that it was nonrepresentative, and tended further to incite "internecine struggles" in the Nazi-ridden country already divided by the feud between Tito and Gen. Draja Mihailovic.

Crashing Plane Motor Just Misses Couple in Bed

San Francisco, Dec. 5 (AP).—An Army fighter plane crashed into an unoccupied house in nearby Daly City today, killing the pilot, demolishing the house and damaging four other residences. Then the plane exploded, spewing flaming gasoline in the street.

The pilot was flight officer George Criswell, 22, of Birmingham, Ala. No civilians were injured.

Mrs. Ralph Carboni said she and her husband were reading in bed. "All of a sudden there was a loud crash and the house shook. We heard a terrific noise which turned out to be the motor bouncing against the wall of our living room."

Harold Udby said that "a 30-pound piece came so close to my canary in the spare bedroom that it took some of the bird's feathers off."

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith was moved four inches off its foundation by the explosion.

Wallace Plants New Rose at the Mexican Embassy

Vice President Wallace officially planted the first of a new variety rosebush in one of two gardens flanking the entrance of the Mexican Embassy yesterday.

The rose, known as "American Orange-Red Floxihunda," is named in honor of Mexico. This variety of rose will also be planted at the Pan-American Highway approaches to Mexico City as soon as more plants are produced. It is the first rose of this type to be named for a Latin-American country.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace and their daughter, Jean, were received by Mexican Ambassador, Francsico Najera and officials of the Embassy at a small reception.

Stabilization Of Telegraph Industry Urged

Presidential appointment of a stabilization committee in the telegraph industry was urged by the American Communications Association, Local 35, CIO, last night.

The plan advocated is one formulated by the International Union. It provides for negotiation of a single national collective bargaining contract which would include all unions and membership for the duration of the war. It would outlaw jurisdictional disputes and strikes, it was reported.

Members of the American Communications Association were reported to have signed individual pledges against strikes, lockouts and organizational disputes.

The pledges were addressed to the President and will be forwarded to him by the national office of the union.

Brig. Gen. Colladay Wins Legion of Merit Award

Brig. Gen. Edgar B. Colladay, USA, of the Westchester Apartments, has won the Legion of Merit award, the War Department announced yesterday.

General Colladay's citation said the award was given for the development of a station in Alaska. He was stationed at Dutch Harbor. He enlisted in the Army in 1910.

Chinese Pursue Retreating Foe in Hunan

Chungking, Dec. 5 (AP).—Japanese forces in northern Hunan Province have been defeated and Chinese forces are continuing to attack the retreating enemy, a Chinese communique announced tonight.

The communique said reports from natives in the area declared that the Japanese were retreating "in a most disorderly condition," and were carrying "a large number of wounded."

In fighting in various sections of Hupeh Province the Chinese communique announced gains and said that 300 Japanese troops had been killed in the northeastern section of Kingmen on the Kingmen-Tangyang highway. The communique also announced the capture of large quantities of material.

A United States 14th Air Force communique earlier said American bombers and fighters were aiding Chinese ground troops in the Tungting area.

(The Tokyo radio declared yesterday that Japanese forces had completely occupied the city of Changteh last Friday.)

The Chinese said the city, which controls the gateway to China's rich rice bowl, was in ruins as a result of severe street fighting which was continuing.

The Chinese asserted that enemy forces in the Changteh area were being encircled, and that several groups had been wiped out.

Soldier Vote 'Steal' Foiled, Moore Says

Senator Moore (Republican) of Oklahoma last night charged that Democratic and Republican Senators who on Friday defeated the bill providing a Federal soldiers' vote had blocked "the most gigantic vote-stealing in history."

His statement was issued in reply to one by Senator Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, published yesterday morning, in which Guffey said the 24 Democrats and 18 Republicans who voted to leave supervision of the voting to the States had joined in an "unholy alliance" to deprive the armed forces of America of the right to vote."

Moore, declaring that no member of the Senate would deny "any constitutional opportunity for the men and women in uniform to vote," asserted:

"No one but the veriest demagogue would make the public statement that those who voted to protect the soldiers and sailors against Tammany machine politics sought to keep them from voting. . . .

Basis for Gigantic "Steal"

"The people and the boys abroad should understand that the New Deal's plan for permitting them to vote laid the basis for the most gigantic vote-stealing in history.

"The simple facts are that the White House palace guard knows that the fourth-terms jig is up, that the people are determined next year to rid themselves of the Roosevelt-Hopkins-Frankfurter bureaucrats. And the Lucas-Green bill for establishing a Federal ballot commission was a bold, last ditch effort to herd our American boys into polling booths the world over and vote them en bloc for the New Deal. It proposed unblushingly that the President of the United States, who presumably will be a candidate for a continuing term in the White House, should be permitted to run his own elections among 10 million boys with no check-rein upon him.

"But the Senate remembered that this same Administration stands convicted in the past of using money appropriated to WPA for relief of hunger to buy elections.

"The hidden iniquities of the bill were revealed almost as soon as the Senate started debate and its authors began to accept any amendments so long as the power of New Deal supervision of the elections was left in their hands. Their most determined struggle was made to keep the ballot commission from being truly bipartisan in its membership.

"The Senate should request from the OWI, the Army and the Navy full information as to what propaganda has been transmitted to our armed forces regarding the elections held last month and the debate and action upon the voting bill."

On the other hand, the National Farmers' Union protested rejection of the bill, President James G. Patton singling out as his principal target Senator Eastland (Democrat) of Mississippi, one of the authors of the States' rights substitute bill, which leaves control of voting in the hands of the States.

Neo-Fascism Feared Taking Hold Under Badoglio, King

Naples, Dec. 5 (AP).—Leaders of Italian democratic groups express fear that neo-Fascism is installing itself in southern Italy under protection of King Vittorio Emanuele and the Badoglio government.

Men such as Count Carlo Sforza, Benedetto Croce, and Rudolfo Omadao particularly are alarmed over what they regard as dissipation by the Italian army of what civil power the Italians are permitted to have under Allied occupation authorities.

But the Italian situation may be placed on a more stable basis this week when Badoglio's government moves from its present seat, where facilities are extremely limited, to a better place near Naples.

The territory in which the government exercises administration is expected to be enlarged with this move.

Sforza, Croce and Omadao in their charge of neo-Facism put the blame on Gen. Antonio Basso Italian army commander of the Naples area. Basso originally was confirmed in his post by the Allied commanders for military purposes, but has since obtained control of the Italian police, engaging in what amounts to governmental functions, these leaders hold.

Once he appointed a judge. The AMG (Allied Military Government) quickly quashed it, telling Basso that such actions were subject to approval by the occupying authorities.

The democratic leaders say that the mere fact that Basso attempted the step disclosed the designs of the Italian army to engage in government, and believe that Basso has the tacit approval of the Badoglio government.

Omadao declared that such influence would lead "only to a new form of fascism with its moral and civil mortification."

Italians place part of the blame for current trends in Italy upon the occupying authorities. Many say that the British are determined to save the House of Savoy for dynastic reasons, and that the Americans favor the continuance of a sort of fascism for the present as a bulwark against communism.

Lurie Speaks At Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 5 (AP).—Robert Lurie, B'Nai B'Rith war service activities national director, spoke today at a meeting of the Hagerstown B'Nai B'Rith organization.

Lurie, who recently has completed speaking tours in Canada and the Southern, Middle Western and New England States, was reported to have developed the theme and idea of civilian defense rallies and rallies for victory in New York, which have been copied throughout the country.

Industrial Union To Have Meeting At Cumberland

The Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, CIO, will begin its seventh annual convention at Cumberland, Md., today at 10 a. m., continuing, in session through Wednesday, "for the purpose of developing every conceivable avenue through which we can maximize our contribution to the war effort," according to the convention call.

Calling attention to election year in 1944, Sydney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer, pointed out that the convention will consider national issues, including subsidies and taxes.

Important Books —Important Gifts

Now, more than ever, Americans want to keep up with modern life at home and abroad. This year you are lucky in having a wealth of brilliant literature. The Christmas Book Store presents you with a list of gift books which includes both the wartime world and an escape from it—something for everyone—and as a suggestion:

"The Battle Is the Pay-off"
—Captain Ralph Ingersoll
First comes the basic training, then officer candidate school—the battlefield is the pay-off. Written as an American soldier sees it, this is the story of the attack at El Guettar and the events both before and after are carefully and clearly recorded. Strong reading—it is not only the story of a soldier of the Sicilian invasion, but one of our Allies every day in every part of the world..... $2

Best Cartoons of the Year—1943
—Edited by Lawrence Lariar
A brand new collection of 300 of the best cartoons of 1943—just the kind to be enjoyed by service men and women and hard pressed civilians. P. S. You will want to read this yourself before giving it for Christmas..... $2

"Long, Long Ago"
—Alexander Woollcott
Rich in anecdotes, stories, sketches of the personalities he met in his last ten years. This first book of his own writing since "While Rome Burns" will make him an unforgettable friend..... $2.75

"Men in Motion"
—Henry J. Taylor
Every thoughtful American should read this penetrating analysis of America today and tomorrow—written by a man who has lived in Germany and the Middle-East—who implies, predicts, but offers hope for the postwar world..... $3

"Journey Among Warriors"
—Eve Curie
Miss Curie, patriot of France, citizen of the world, traveled over 40,000 miles of battlefronts to relate a vivid and vital story of the civilians and the fighting men of Russia, the Middle-East and China. $3.50

"We Followed Our Hearts to Hollywood"
—Emily Kimbrough
"There they go again." Some "scheming chemistry" begins to operate when Emily and Cornelia Otis Skinner take a trip together. Unpredictable happenings in Hollywood where a movie is being made of that other best seller, "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay." Humorously illustrated by Helen E. Hokinson..... $2.50

"Also The Hills"
—Frances Parkinson Keyes
A romance of today—the three Farmans leave their ancestral home to take part in various phases of the war effort. The tumult of Washington, the false quiet of New England towns, are the backgrounds for a novel which shows the courage and spirit of modern war-time youth..... $3

"Jane's Fighting Ships"
—Edited by Francis E. McMurtrie
The most complete and authentic encyclopedia of all the navies of the world with a complete record of naval progress. Listings of newly built ships and ship sinkings up to May, 1943 are included—over 3,000 photographs and illustrations..... $19

"The Apostle"
—Sholem Asch
A novel depicting the mighty character of Paul by the author of "The Nazarene," written in the same masterful style. The story opens seven weeks after the crucifixion of Christ and shows how St. Paul, almost singlehanded, brings Christianity to the Western world. $3

"The Promise"
—Pearl Buck
A powerful romance—this continuation of "Dragon Seed"—carries the scene from China to the jungles of Burma. The theme is the desperate need of the white men and the Chinese to understand each other. The Promise—hope of foreign aid against the Japs. $2.50

Move to Delay Subsidy Vote Gains Ground

subsidies, said he thought there is "a good chance" that some compromise will be reached. He did not elaborate, except to note that the possibility of offering a resolution to continue the CCC for 60 days is under consideration.

Ellender said that if such a bill were passed by Congress, subsidy payments could be continued for the next 60 days with Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other funds which would be available to the CCC.

Meanwhile, Senator Wagner of New York, chairman of the Banking Committee, arranged for the committee to hear on Thursday numerous women's organizations backing subsidies.

Subsidy support came, also, from Food for Freedom, an organization headed by Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow which sent to more than 80 national organizations which participated in the national consumers food conference in Cleveland several weeks ago a recommendation that immediate action in support of food subsidies be taken to keep the cost of living in check.

The recommendations said that if present food subsidies are eliminated on Decemb. 31, food prices will immediately rise by 7 per cent, and "in six months you may pay 75 cents a pound for pork chops, 60 cents a pound for hamburger, $1 a pound for butter, 30 cents a quart for milk, 14 cents a pound for sugar and 20 cents for a loaf of bread."

In addition, consumers were urged to support proposals for "the family type of farm as the pattern of American agriculture," grade labeling on foods, milk rationing "as soono as a feasible plan can be developed, providing larger than average rations to children, pregnant and nursing mothers," and use of a part "of our national food production and income in the postwar period . . . to helping the devastated regions of the world. . . ."

Nazi Leaders Lose Loot in Bombings

Stockholm, Dec. 5 (AP).—Nazi leaders have suffered heavy losses through destruction of the main offices of virtually all Berlin's big banks except the Reichsbank by Allied aerial bombs, informants from Berlin said today.

The leaders were reported to have had stored in bank vaults valuables, furs, and art treasures accumulated in occupied countries and in 10 years of rule over Germany.

bushed."

Troubles with military intelligence reports also arose, both from inaccurate information and garbled reports. In one instance, intelligence agencies furnished information that led to a division commander deciding that German resistance at a certain point would be light, whereas its was discovered the enemy positions had been worked on for two months and were carved into solid rock in many places.

Slight Exaggeration

In another instance, an observation post reported three "Italians" were descending a certain hill. In relaying the information back the original wording was twisted to three "battalions" coming down the hill.

Here are some other points made in the critique:

The German tendency to launch counterattacks in an immediate attempt to recover lost ground necessitates immediate preparation of fire to protect newly gained positions. One division commander said his artillery "killed more Germans when they made these counterattacks than it did in all the preparation, fire on targets and in support during attack."

"As developed in the present war, the land mine and the various types of booby traps have proved to be a most formidable and powerful weapon and serious obstacle in the advance and operations of all arms."

Too Much for Engineers

No longer is it possible for the engineers to clear away mine fields: all branches must train men for this work.

"The use of highly trained snipers assumed increasing importance throughout the campaign. The development and effective use of snipers should be given special attention."

"Air attack has been generally ineffective against armored vehicles. It has been reported that even dive-bombing has failed to cause much damage to medium tanks."

Positive identification of aircraft is essential before antiaircraft fire is opened.

"In the campaign, identification was unsatisfactory, and in many instances friendly planes were fired on and hostile planes were allowed to pass within range unmolested."

Zoning System Plan to Save Gas

Gasoline rationing and transportation officials will meet today in the District Building at 2:30 p. m. in an effort to establish a "route zoning system" for car-sharing for those coming into the District daily.

Maps prepared by the Army map service will be studied to determine distances via the several routes leading to the downtown section of the District, it was said. It is planned to get at least 50 per cent of the commuters into share-the-ride groups.

Attending the meeting will be representatives of the National and District OPA, the War Price and Rationing Boards from the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia together with many officials of transportation companies.

tax hikes that were estimated to bring in $616,000,000. Integration of the victory tax with the individual income tax, with consequent adjustments in rates, is estimated to account for another $154,800,000.

Sales Tax Ruled Out

The House has ruled out a Federal sales tax and it probably will not be advanced seriously in the Senate Finance Committee. There was guarded discussion of the practicability of another major rise in individual income tax rates, but few thought the increase could be jammed through a Congress already conscious of next year's national elections.

Among witnesses docketed to testify on the contract renegotiation amendments were Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal, Major Gen. Lucius D. Clay, Assistant Atty. Gen. Francis M. Shea, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, Joseph M. Dodge, chairman of the joint price adjustment board; Randolph Paul, general counsel for the Treasury, and Comdr. Arthur G. Rydstrom, of the Maritime Commission's price adjustment board.

Mosley Tied By Stern Rules, Morrison Says

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—Home Secretary Herbert Morrison, in a speech at Wembley repeatedly interrupted by hecklers, declared today that in releasing Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader, from prison, he had "tied him up with sterner conditions" than any detention order.

Morrison finally silenced the hecklers by shouting in the microphone that "I don't mind fighting to make my speech, but I will not break my neck to answer your questions. Either you listen, or I will wind up."

He declared that "anyone would think I had let Mosley free to resume political activity. That is the reverse of the truth. I've tied him up with sterner conditions than in any other 18B detention order. And I've warned him that if there is any nonsense, my powers of redetention remain in full force.

"The real underlying cause of public concern about Mosley is the fear on the part of many people that something is being done or contemplated that will weaken or defeat the rooted determination of this country to have done not merely with the Axis, but with Fascism.

"I say it is those who want 18B administered politically and in the light of doctrinaire ideologies and opinions who are playing with Fascism."

Mosley's release aroused a storm of protest. The pre-war leader of the British Blackshirt party was ordered released on medical grounds about two weeks ago. He had been under detention since May, 1940.

Alliance Group To Ask Closing of Burlesque House

The District Commissioners this week will be asked to close an unidentified burlesque house by the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States, the Rev. Harry L. Bowlby, general secretary, said last night at the 55th anniversary of the founding of the organization in Foundry Methodist Church.

The Rev. Bowlby said the theater is the "kind that should be moved on at once." He said he helped to close a dozen such theaters in New York, his home.

C. Oliver Moore, New York lawyer, addressed the meeting. His subject was "The First Enigma."

The organization was formed in Foundry Methodist Church when the edifice stood at 14th and G sts. nw. The present location is 16th and P sts. nw.

Secretary of War Stimson wrote the meeting congratulating it on its "fine and Christian work."

Soldier Says It's Time to Pray When You Feel Wind of Bullets

Atlanta, Dec. 5 (AP).—It's time to pray "when the bullets come so close you can feel the wind from them," Corpl. James M. Cain of Atlanta wrote his wife after participating in a successful American assault on an unnamed European beachhead.

Cain, an automatic rifleman, wrote that he was "in the first wave of beachhead landing, and the first American troops to land in Europe."

Caught in Nazi Trap

"A few days later," he continued, "we had to attack a hill that the Germans were on, and this turned out to be worse than the beachhead landing. We were on the hill for two days and the Germans caught us in a trap.

"There was a big three-story house on the side of the mountain. Some of us got in it and fought out of the windows. We did not think we could hold out until dark. They shelled the house with big shells. I was in a room on the top floor and a shell came through the roof in the room where I was. All of us thought that we would be killed or captured, but we were going to fight to the last man.

Had to Leave Wounded

"They tried to get in the house four times, but we beat them off. We did hold out until dark. We had to leave the wounded there, and we slipped out the back door.

"Ten of us left together. We were two miles behind the enemy lines. We had to crawl through ditches. We passed so close to Germans we could hear them talking. If they had seen us I would not be here today. It took us two days to crawl back to our lines.

"I know that prayer is what brought me out of some of the places I have been in. If it is God's will I will come home. I know I will have a lot more to go through. I have seen times when all of the boys were praying. It is time to pray when the bullets come so close you can feel the wind from them."

D. C. to Furnish More Prewar Dads in January

The first contingent of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers to be called to the service in their draft number order will assemble this morning at Selective Service headquarters, Weightman School, 23d and M sts. nw.

The men have been ordered to report at headquarters and will go immediately to Fort Myer, Va., where they will be given their physicals and those accepted by the Army will be inducted and granted furloughs to put their personal affairs in order.

While this is the first induction of men officially classified as pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, others with children have been drafted and inducted, but these were in nondeferrable occupations. Because of this they were inducted ahead of their normal turn.

Officials said last night that today's contingent would be the forerunner of others and that for January the bulk of the quota probably would be fathers.

Lieutenant Kelly Upholds Fighting Tradition of Irish Name

With the Fifth Army near Mignano, Dec. 4 (Delayed) (AP).—Up in the frontlines they call Second Lieut. Charles E. Kelly of Pittsburg, Pa., "Commando Kelly."

For Kelly, with a mug as Irish as a four-leaf clover, turned out to be a real tough gent where the Germans are concerned.

A fracas started on a mountain side near here with the Yanks contesting with some stubborn Nazis who did not know about Kelly's temper. The Pittsburgh scourge moved in on a machine gun nest with his automatic rifle blazing, but suddenly the gun jammed.

The Germans saw Kelly was in trouble, so they came out of their foxholes after him. Kelly could not shoot at them, but in a slit trench beside him was a stack of mortar shells. So he pulled the plugs on some shells and tossed them at the Germans by hand. And he stopped them.

Not long after that, Kelly was in a little town when the Germans began an attack. Kelly had only a few men with him and saw they didn't have a chance to hold out against overwhelming numbers.

"Get the hell out," he told his sergeant. "I'll hold 'em off and see you later."

The last his buddies saw of Kelly he was shooting at the Germans from the window of a building, his lone tommygun popping like mad.

Back at the battalion, they felt pretty bad about losing Kelly. Everyone liked the Irishman and his friends walked around with glum faces.

But Kelly turned up.

"I want some more ammunition," he said. "I'm going back after those b————. They can't chase me out of town."

Clemenceau Moved To Prison in Germany

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Michel Clemenceau, son of the late Premier Georges Clemenceau, has been transferred from an internment camp in France to a prison in Germany, the Dakar radio said today.

The radio said 400 Alsatian families recently had been deported to Germany because the men refused to obey Nazi mobilization orders.

Although both parents have jobs, the Howard Smiths, 425 Sinton Ave., Pittsburgh, still find plenty of time to work together on "home projects." And they, like millions of others, are not only working but saving for the kind of future they want—the kind of Post War World we all want.

How the Smiths Use Their Wartime Money to Help Build Their Personal Post War World

You can do the same Practical Things the Smiths are doing

MRS. ANNA MARIE SMITH has taken a job to release a man for the war, but the Smiths are not spending the money that she adds to the family budget.

They are living on less than Mr. Smith alone earns. The rest goes into building the Post War World they have planned, secure and comfortable with the better things of American living.

All of us can do the things our Government recommends to speed the day of Victory and to help provide for our own "better tomorrow." Here they are:

1. Buy and hold war bonds—to lend our country the money it needs now to fight the war to Victory.
2. Pay willingly your share of taxes—including increased taxes—that our country needs.
3. Provide for your own and your family's future by adequate life insurance and savings.
4. Reduce your debts as much as possible and avoid making needless new ones.
5. Buy only what you need and make what you have last longer.
6. Live faithfully by the rationing rules to conserve goods of which there are shortages.
7. Cooperate with our Government's price and wage stabilization program.

Most of us have been doing several, if not all, of these things. It's natural for an American to follow the path of hard work and thrift, because these are the virtues that have won freedom and security for us since our earliest days.

And by doing all these things—by spending less and saving more—we not only provide for the kind of future we want. We also help a vitally important home-front campaign now under way to keep down the cost of living.

The seven things we can do are clear—the benefits of doing them are no less evident. We can start today to put them into action by filling out the budget form here—it helps show where we can put more money usefully to work—for the nation and for ourselves.

AMERICA'S LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES bring you this plan of action not only to help you to win the kind of future you want, but to urge you to join wholeheartedly with all loyal Americans to keep down living costs during these critical war days.

By acquiring life insurance, with the guidance of their life insurance agents, 67 million policyholders have already joined together in taking one of the effective steps our Government suggests.

Remember that the premiums you pay for your life insurance are also helping to pay for the war—for a large part of them are invested in Government bonds.

Contracts Won't Be Canceled—Kaiser

Builder's Son Says Brewster Will Turn Out Planes

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Henry J. Kaiser, jr., son of the shipbuilder and airplane manufacturer, said here today that rumors of cancelation of naval contracts for fighter planes with the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., of which his father is president, are "entirely unfounded."

Kaiser spoke at a meeting of Brewster supervisory personnel and union shop stewards which was called to discuss an agreement, recently signed, between the company and Local 365, United Automobile Workers, CIO.

"Rumors of the cancellation of Brewster contracts by the Vinson sub-committee are entirely unfounded," Kaiser said. "It appears that Brewster is going to be given an opportunity to show it can produce a sufficient number of fighter planes. One thing the committee may do, however, is to come back and look at us in 90 days."

Asked for additional comment at the close of the meeting, Kaiser said he meant to convey his own and "the personal assurances" of his father that there would be no cancellation of contracts.

"Dad and I are of that opinion," he added.

In a statement made last week in Washington, Kaiser, sr., had expressed concern over grapevine reports that the House Naval Subcommittee, headed by Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia, would recommend cancellation of naval contracts with the Brewster Co. because of failure to meet production schedules.

Brewster maintains plants at Long Island City, N. Y., Newark, N. J., and Johnsville, Pa.

10 Reported Shot By Chiasso Fascists

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 5 (AP).—A Swiss telegraphic agency dispatch from Chiasso said today that 10 persons had been shot by order of a special Fascist tribunal in retaliation for the fatal shooting of Lieut. Col. Gino Boggi, Fascist military chief of the Florence district.

2-Piano Art Brilliantly Presented

By Ray C. B. Brown

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Pierre Luboschutz and Genia Nemenov in a two-piano recital on Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Program of compositions by Mozart, Vivaldi, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Lopatnikov, Shostakovich Levitzki and Stravinski.

Duo-piano playing of clean technical quality, expert dove-tailing of phrases and admirable synchrony was exhibited by Pierre Luboschutz and Genia Nemenov in Constitutional Hall yesterday afternoon. The nature of the program did not allow for much scope in interpretation, as most of the pieces were chosen for brilliance, but when the performers did devote themselves to that aspect of their art, as in the slow movement of the Vivaldi-Bach concerto in A minor and Schumann's "Andante and Variations," they used expressive tone-coloring in a lyric eloquence. The Schumann piece, so characteristic of that composer's sentimental ardency, was particularly well done.

The program was about equally divided between arrangements and original compositions for two pianos. In the former category were the Conus version of Mozart's overture to "Le Nozze di Fogaro," the Vivaldi-Bach concer o, Shostakovich's "Once in Geneva" polka, Lubeschu's version of Mendelssohn's "Allegro Brilliant" in A major for piano duet, and the Russian dance from Stravinski's 'Petrushka."

That arrangements are never as satisfactory as music conceived for two keyboards was evident in the integral solidity of the Schumann work, in the linked intimacy of Chopin's major rondo, in the closely woven Arabesque by Nikolai Lopathikov and Misha Levitski's "Valse Tzigane."

Phillips Memorial Gallery presents a concert of chamber music by members of the U. S. Army Air Forces Band on Sunday afternoon. Artists: John Martin, violoncello; Arthur Sussman, piano and horn; Milton Salkind, piano; John R. Barrows, horn; Joe Eger, horn; Elliot Morgenstren, horn; Leigh Martinet, horn; Aobert Weatherley, trumpet; Gordon Pulis, trombone. Program of compositions by John Verrall, George Handel, Nikolai Cherephin and Francis Poulenc.

An interesting concert arranged by Staff Sergt. John R. Barrows and performed by himself and nine other members of the United States Army Air Forces Band was enjoyed yesterday afternoon by a capacity audience at Phillips Memorial Gallery. There was only one repertoire work on the program, and that was a good one—a violoncello sonata by Handel that was capably read by Pfc. John Martin with Sergt. Milton Salkind at the piano. Exhibit A of music by living composers was a sonata for horn and piano by John Verrall, 35-year-old American composer from Iowa who was very recently inducted into the armed forces. Performed by Sergt. Barrows and Corpl. Arthur Sussman, it proved to be captivating music in polyphonic style with a transparent quality caused by harmonic fourths and fifths.

Corpls. Joe Eger, Arthur Sussman and Pfc. Leigh Martinet played three of the six short quartets for horns composed by Nikolai Cherepnin, who is still living at 70 and not to be confused with his son, Alexander. The mellow character of horn tone, as well as its exciting effect in forte emission, gave pleasant moments in the "Dance Song," "Folk Song" and "The Hunt." Last came an amusing sonata by Francis Poulenc for trumpet (Sergt. Robert Weatherley), horn (Sergt. Barrows) and trombone (Sergt. Gordon Polis). Ironical in manner, it suggests a picnic or a fete champetre of Parisian bourgeois.

National Gallery of Art presents Emanuel Vardi and Earl Wild in a recital of music for viola and piano on Sunday night. Program: Prelude (Emanuel Moor), Sonata in F flat major, Op. 120 No. 2 (Johannes Brahms), Sonata (Arnold Bax), Aria (Anatol Alexandrov), Novelette (Leo Russotto), Blues Prelude and Fugue (Herbert Haufrecht), An einsamer Qualle (Richard Strauss), Rondo from Violin Concerto No. 2 in B minor (Niccolo Paganini-Kreisler-Vardi).

Crowded as usual was the east garden court of the National Gallery of Art last evening, when Emanuel Vardi and Earl Wild, artists of the United States Navy Band Orchestra, gave a delightful recital. Vardi's tone on the viola is one of remarkable richness and beauty, and Wild is a pianist whose talent is well adapted to ensemble playing. The program began with an unfamiliar and poetic prelude by Emanuel Moor, which was followed by the E flat major sonata that Brahms wrote for clarinet but afterwards added "or viola." This romantic work sounds infinitely better on the viola which brings out its beauties of melody with greater grace.

It is doubtful if the sonata by Arnold Bax has been played here before. This is imaginative music filled with Keltic atmosphere and reminds one of the poetry of Yeats. The second movement, suggestive of some remote conflict, among the old champions of Erin, is the least effective because of its clangorous quality, but the first and third movements have infinite charm.

First local performances were given of pieces written by American composers expressly for Vardi—Leo Russotto's sprightly "Novelette" with a good narrative manner and Herbert Haufrecht's "Blues Prelude and Fugue," an interesting combination of the classic form with the blue intonations. The fugue is not fully worked out and seems curtailed, but the prelude has a refreshing impudence. A melodious aria by Anatol Alexandrov and a transcription of Richard Strauss' "An einsamer Qualle" were in the pure lyric vein. At the close Vardi played with technical brilliance and brio his adaptation of Kreisler's version of Paganini's "La Campanella," a feat of virtuosity.

Colley Receives Purple Heart; Served in Solomons Operation

Woodrow Wilson Colley, 1700 Capitol ave. ne., fireman first class, USN, has been awarded the Purple Heart by Capt. W. J. Riddick, commanding officer of the Naval Hospital at Charleston Navy Yard, it was learned last night. The award was made for wounds received August 7, 1942 during an amphibious operation on one of the Solomon Islands.

COLLEY

Colley now is convalescing from malaria contracted during the 4½ months he spent in the Solomons.

"I was attached to a transport," Colley explained in telling how he received shrapnel wounds in his hip and legs. "We were putting Marines ashore in a landing boat, working with a small landing craft force. By the time we touched the beach, three men had been killed and eight wounded. I got mine just as we made it. There were about 850 Japs dug in beyond the beach. We were attacking with a much smaller force.

"Shrapnel from a Jap mortar got me, but I was treated in the sick bay back aboard ship, and was able to continue with my part of the job. We counted 13 large holes in our boat. On our second trip ashore, to land supplies for the men we'd already beached, a battle broke out offshore, and our ship had to pull off and leave us stranded.

"From then until November, we operated with the Marines. The USS Aaron Ward got us off late that month, and by that time I had a beaut of a case of malaria. From New Caledonia I was taken to the United States Naval Hospital, Oakland, Calif., and from there, here."

Colley, who was born in Chase City, Va., August 12, 1917, at the time of enlistment lived with his mother, Mrs. H. L. Colley, at the Capitol ave. address.

St. Vincent de Paul Council Holds Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Particular Council of the St. Vincent de Paul Society was held yesterday in Holy Comforter Hall, 15th and East Capitol sts. More than 150 persons from 26 parishes were present.

A report of the work of the society showed that while expenditures for material aid had decreased, there was an increase in the spiritual work, such as hospital and penal institution work and the visiting of the sick.

Arthur J. Dodge Is Dead at 83; Veteran Washington Newsman

Arthur J. Dodge, who walked into a newspaper office and got a job 68 years ago and became second president of the National Press Club, died at the age of 83 yesterday at his home in the Portner Apartments.

DODGE

Legend has it Dodge was the hero of the Peck's Bad Boy series, that he knew everyone there was to know in Washington at the turn of the century, and that he had an unexplained liking for narrow stairways.

He edited small-town papers and wrote for big ones in the Midwest. He wound up a philosopher after he had begun by rooting for the Democrats on the Menasha (Wis.) Press. He was its editor, publisher, owner, reporter and printer when he was 20 years old.

He went to Milwaukee, Oshkosh, St. Paul and all over Wisconsin, working for papers and came to Washington in 1887. Periodically, he'd leave newspapering, but always returned.

In 1901 he received his LLB degree at George Washington University, and in 1903 his LL.M at National University. On the side, he was reporting the Washington scene and campaigning for high tariffs, higher silver, and, later, Calvin Coolidge.

He wrote magazine articles and books on everything from Shakespeare to Denver. His best known work is "Newspapers and Newspaperment from 1800 to 1942." He never claimed to know all of them—but almost all.

He was a special attorney for the Justice Department, retiring early this year to meditate, his sons say.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Wednesday at Hysongs funeral home. Chaplain of the Senate, Dr. Frederick B. Harris will preside. Interment, which will be private, is at Rock Creek Cemetery.

Surviving are two sons, Arthur R. Dodge, of 1323 Monroe st. nw., and Lieut. John H. Dodge, USNR; a daughter, Mrs. Grace D. Malmstrom of Belmont, Mass., and a sister, Mrs. Lee J. Hubbard of Minneapolis. He was the cousin of Homer Dodge, local newspaperman.

James H. Cissel

Funeral mass for James Herbert Cissel, 72, Silver Spring pioneer businessman and vice president of the Suburban National Bank, will be said at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow at St. Michaels Church, Silver Spring. Interment will be at Forest Glen Cemetery.

Mr. Cissel is survived by his son, Maj. Joseph C. Cissel, now on duty in Hawaii; six brothers, Milton L., Southern Maryland; Wilbur F., John C. and Hardy H., all of Silver Spring; Trueman R., Colesville; Sebastian B., Alpha, Howard County, and a sister, Mrs. Nellie Hobbs, also of Alpha.

After an illness of ten weeks, Mr. Cissel died at Doctors Hospital Saturday night.

John S. Hurley

John S. Hurley, a graduate of the Law School of Georgetown University, who served as national director for the enforcement of the Prohibition Act died yesterday in Manchester, N. H., his home city.

He served in the New Hampshire House and Senate, and also was a member of the State probation board and former chairman of the liquor commission.

OPA to Return Ration Stamps For Fats Starting December 13

The Office of Price Administration's new program of paying brown ration stamps for salvaged kitchen fats will start December 13.

Retailers will give housewives one ration point for each half pound of used fats turned in, and will also continue payment of 4 cents a pound for the salvage.

The points-for-fats program is intended to spur collection of fats needed for manufacture of glycerine and sulfa drugs.

OPA pointed out that since the housewife can collect points for kitchen fats as soon as she has half a pound, it will be unnecessary for consumers to save large amounts before taking the fats to the retailer. Retailers will not give points for less than one-half a pound, nor for any fractional overweight—such as one pound two ounces—as this would involve giving fractions of a point.

Those who get ration points in return for their waste fats may spend the points on meat, cheese, butter or any other food bought with brown ration stamps.

Retailers will be reimbursed for the points they give to consumers by renderers and collectors of waste fats, whose function of collecting and processing household fats is undisturbed by the points-for-fats arrangement. Both the renderers and collectors, in turn, are to be given an allotment of ration points to use in paying retailers and others.

De Marignys Reach Havana to Live

Havana, Cuba., Dec. 5 (AP).—Count Alfred de Marigny arrived here today, intending to make Cuba his home. Accompanied by his wife, Nancy, careworn beyond her 19 years, he came from Nassau, Bahamas, where he was asked to leave or face deportation following his acquittal of the murder of his father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes.

The De Marignys traveled in a small, uncomfortable freight boat. Nancy complained of two nights without sleep in the cabinless motor ship.

Reeducate Axis, Grew's Peace Plan

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Dec. 5.—Joseph C. Grew, former American Ambassador to Japan, said today that the people of the Axis countries should at the end of the war be dealt with so as to be "forever cured of the illusion that aggression pays," but added that the aim of the United Nations should be the building of a world based on a system of reeducation "devoid of browbeating or vindictiveness."

"We want the people of the world, including our present enemies, to look forward, not to the day when they can achieve revenge, but forward to a peaceful, lawful, cooperative, solvent, productive and prosperous national and international life, purged forever over of the poison of aggressive militarism."

Warning Sounded on Speedy Conversion of War Plants

By the Associated Press

Government concern over conversion of Treasury-financed war plants to peacetime production brought a warning yesterday that speedy changes might result in "terrific and inequitable impacts upon an established industry."

A study of the problem by Fred E. Berquist, Justice Department economist, shows that Government contracting agencies have authorized expenditure of $15,555,000,000 in 2598 plants. The total does not include projects of less than $25,000 or of $2,278,000,000 committed for machine tool purchases by the Army, Navy and Defense Plant Corporation.

With the approval of the anti-trust division, Berquist already has urged some industrial groups to start the spade work now instead of waiting until the end of the war.

His study resulted in a recommendation for "orderly liquidation" of the Government-financed plants by sale or lease. Such a method, he said, probably would bring "maximum dollar recovery."

"Quick disposal might readily be arranged by making necessary price and term concessions," Berquist added.

"It is doubtful, however, whether the people generally would tolerate the creation of many windfalls to private industry which would accrue under such a policy. Furthermore, such a policy might result in terrific and inequitable impacts upon an established industry and the net effect be one of future boomerang in the economy."

Berquist expressed belief the vast shipbuilding, aircraft and ordnance facilities will have a low degree of convertibility for civilian production and that much of the equipment in other categories is too highly specialized to be adaptable for civilian output.

Finns May Mediate With Nazis Over Norway Students

The Finnish Legation announced yesterday that the Finnish government will give serious consideration to requests of the heads of the three universities of their country that steps be taken to moderate the fate of more than 1200 students and professors of the Oslo (Norway) University, who were arrested in mass raids by the Nazis and held as anti-Quislings.

A previous attempt by the Swedish government to intervene resulted only in increased raids by the Nazis, it was reported, and the Germans contended they were merely protecting the students at Oslo from "serious consequences of their action."

Reports from Sweden said many of the students will be taken to Germany for internment in an attempt to stop democratic movements in occupied Norway.

Gallinger Again

Once more the wheels of bungling local government have turned full cycle. The Senate Appropriations Committee has apparently decided that Gallinger Municipal Hospital is not the disgrace to the Nation that the Holman Committee recently found it to be. At any rate, funds to relieve some of the hospital's critical deficiencies in administrative personnel have been eliminated from the supplemental national defense bill. If this action stands, Gallinger will have to muddle along without much chance of overcoming its pitiful inadequacies.

At various times District officials have attempted to rescue Gallinger from its filth, its run-down condition, its lack of equipment, its old wooden shacks and its antiquated methods resulting from the denial of modern facilities. Usually they have been squelched by appropriating committees. Then the hospital has been allowed to drift into a routine of mediocre service until some member of Congress has discovered afresh that it is a disgrace to the Capital City. It seems that the Holman Committee didn't understand this practice. In any event, it undiscriminatingly directed its chief fire upon local officials connected with the hospital. That did have the beneficial effect of reviving plans for the rehabilitation of Gallinger. But now another committee of the Senate has slapped down this reform movement by withholding funds.

The Senate committee which investigated Gallinger found conditions "for which the people of this District may well shudder with shame." It cited evidence of "cruelty and barbarity" in the psychopathic ward, of "petty pilfering" among hospital employes, of food improperly prepared and served to patients, of filth and dirt throughout the hospital, of callous indifference to the welfare of patients among the hospital employes, and a feeling among the management of not being responsible to anyone. "The number of deaths in the hospital," the committee declared, "seems unnecessarily large." It is difficult to see how the committee could have brought in a more serious indictment.

Now the poor supervision of the hospital is obviously due in large part to its lack of an assistant superintendent and a few other key staff members. Yet the funds to create these positions is denied by the Appropriations Committee. Probably the most constructive step the Holman Committee could take in the circumstances would be to revise its report so as to condemn Senator McKellar and his colleagues or at least recommend that they be relieved of a municipal function of which they know so little.

Subsidy For Sedition

Secretary Morgenthau has given the newspaper subsidy bill what should prove to be a coup de grace. The ostensible purpose of the bill is to promote the sale of war bonds through newspaper advertising. But the Secretary of the Treasury, who is responsible for the war-bond campaigns, says that "it is likely to prove an almost insurmountable hurdle to the continued promotion of war bonds." Congress would be inexcusably short-sighted to risk disruption of the next war-bond campaign by forcing the Treasury to spend 15 million dollars for something which it can get more successfully without charge.

If that argument should not convince the House, however, another of equal potency may be added to it. The bill as it stands would compel the Treasury to place its advertising without discrimination between newspapers. That is essential, of course, to prevent any suspicion that these funds might be distributed in accord with political bias. But it would have the effect of subsidizing many scandalous little sheets that are trying to destroy our democratic way of life, if they are not actually engaged in sedition. Six newspapers have been suspended from use of the newspaper mailing privilege for sedition. These would not be eligible for participation in the subsidy. But various others that are under investigation by the postal authorities or the Department of Justice would be paid for advertising Government bonds while they peddle their fascistic or communistic or anti-American views. It is one thing to permit this vicious type of journalism to operate under general protection of freedom of the press and quite another thing to hand it Federal subsidies. Is the House prepared to encourage publication of such scurvy sheets by cutting them in on a pork-barrel measure?

Forehandedness

The most important task of Congress, next to strengthening the Administration's hand in the unequal battle against inflation, is to ready the country for a smooth transition to a peacetime economy. In this respect Congress has hitherto been unsystematic. In the Senate, to be sure, there is a subcommittee on postwar problems under Senator George. But, with comprehensive demobilization dependent upon a whole series of enabling acts, a joint committee of Congress is needed for the purpose of developing a legislative program. It is to be hoped that the legislators without further delay will appoint such a committee. In the interim, time has been taken by the forelock—and in the House, not the Senate—in regard to one of the most vital elements of postwar adjustment. We mean air transportation. The initiative is due to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, which, in the so-called Lea bill, seeks to bring Federal regulation abreast of postwar requirements. Debate may start today, and if the bill is passed, as it should be, the House will have given our preparedness a flying start.

It is a platitude to say that we are now in an air age. What we do not yet recognize is that that fact is hidden from the people by military restrictions on civilian travel and on the improvement of civilian aircraft. The effect of the end of the war upon air transport will be something like the lifting of a curtain upon the air age. Then we shall realize in experience what we as yet realize only by assurance. No place in the habitable world, as our peregrinating military officers are vividly aware of already, will be farther away than 48 hours. At home distances will be shrunk by the same measure as soon as the air transport industry is enabled to take advantage of wartime technological advance. Clearly the fillip to the use of aviation and to the speed and size of aircraft will demand up-to-date Federal regulation. That is what the managers of the Lea bill seek to provide. The bill would extend Federal jurisdiction to all commerce anywhere in the air space of the United States. This greater responsibility would call for better administration. So the bill would set up a Civil Aeronautical Authority as an independent agency similar to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Such changes are not as drastic as they might seem. Already, as a practical matter, Federal regulation of the American air has been the rule, and this bill would formalize existing practice, as well as regularize a score of procedures which, as a result of the rapid growth of aviation, have not been written into permanent law. Passage of the bill would remove the danger from the air transport industry of that deterring and conflicting State regulation which formerly held back rail and motor transportation.

There is, of course, some opposition to the Lea bill from vested interests in the States, as well as from rival forms of transport. Some of it is based upon misunderstanding. The Lea bill, far from destroying States' rights in respect of aviation, recognizes those rights over functions which constitute the bulk of present State activity. States and municipalities would still build, administer and operate airports. They would still regulate purely intrastate private and miscellaneous flying, but in a way consistent with Federal safety codes. They would still be responsible for the zoning of airports. Beyond these and similar activities, however, authority is vested in the Federal Government, on the undeniable assumption that any other course would sabotage all progress in air transport. Imagine aviators having to face different requirements, makers different specifications, commercial operators doing business according to 49 different laws. This very recital is its own rebuttal. The only course compatible with common sense is the provision through the Lea bill of a coordinated and simplified code instead of duplicating and conflicting State codes. But to this newspaper the chief argument for an over-all authority situated in Washington is that national defense requires it.

In the Lea bill the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce has again demonstrated its industry and forehandedness. From the outset flying, as we have said before, has had no firmer or more enlightened friend than this committee. It was ahead of developments in the framing of the Air Commerce Act of 1926. When the group began work on this legislation, there were hardly any civil aircraft, no air lines, and civil flying was largely barnstorming. There was a similar forehandedness in the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938. That our civil aviation leads the world in quality and volume of service is largely due to the way that this act facilitated development. Now, in the Lea bill, the committee has again acted betimes, and the House, as a result of the committee's vision, is given the same opportunity to be of service to a future America. The Lea bill, by ushering in the air age at home, would show the soldiers on service that while they have been fighting, the legislators have been preparing the country for their return.

After Fifty Years

The Allied decision to restore Formosa to China means the ultimate undoing of one of the oldest acts of aggression by Japan. For it was after the first Sino-Japanese War, in 1895, that Formosa was acquired by Japan, an acquisition that gave the island empire its first important colony, one valuable not only for certain raw material resources, notably the camphor tree, but also for its strategic location fronting the Fukien coast of China. The Formosa Channel at its narrowest is only 90 miles.

During these 48 years the Japanese have tried with might and main to Japonize the population. In a measure they have succeeded. But the population along the coast remains very largely as Chinese as it was in the days of the Treaty of Shimonoseki, and Japanese control of the interior has never been more than sketchy. Both for historic reasons and out of strategic considerations the promised return of Formosa to China will be applauded.

Scooper Scooped

One does not have to be much of a psychologist to perceive that the propaganda effect of whatever was accomplished at Cairo among Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Churchill and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and among the President, the Prime Minister and Marshal Stalin at Teheran has been pretty well nullified by the stupidities and ineptitudes of the American censorship. The main news about these meetings is that the White House and the Office of War Information have allowed themselves to be scooped on their own stories twice in a single week, first by Mr. Brendan Bracken's Ministry of Information and again by Stalin's official news agency.

We waive the point that the American newspapers, which, having consented to wear a strait jacket of censorship for the duration of the war, have been made to look rather silly. What we are concerned about is that, so far as this country is concerned, these two episodes have been tantamount to two doses of adrenalin to what had seemed the dying cult of American isolationism. Most of the journalistic innovations of the past 50 years have been of American origin and the greatest of these American innovations has been the development of world-wide organizations for the rapid collection and distribution of important news. We must not now be surprised if the isolationists ask, since we cannot protect our interest in a pursuit at which we are supposed to excel, how we can expect to protect it in the game of diplomacy and peace-making for which we have not hitherto, as a nation, evinced any great aptitude.

Such questions, it may be recalled, were repeatedly asked by the isolationist irreconcilables of 1919-20. The present Administration, which is not without a disposition to extend its monopoly of news sources over a larger and larger field of activity or to use this monopoly of news in the interest of its own policy, might do well to investigate how much the asinine censorship imposed on American correspondents covering the Paris peace discussions may have hac to do with the subsequent organization of American public opinion against the Versailles Treaty and the League of Nations. Just as last week the Axis-controlled radio stations gave us accounts of the proceedings at Teheran, so at the time of the Paris Conference the full text of the treaty was published in Germany more than a month before it was released to the United States. The net result was that our isolationists were given a plausible pretext for asserting that the treaty contained provisions so inimical to American interests that it would be necessary to break them very gradually and gently to the American public.

There is nothing yet to show that either the British agency, Reuters, or the Soviet radio announcers violated any journalistic ethic or convention in breaking the news before the White House was ready to break it. There is no reason that we can see why either the British or the Russians were obliged to accept American military censorship, especially since neither place of meeting was an American military zone. Nor is there, as far as we know, any reason why either the British or the Russians must conform to the ideas of the White House concerning the proper timing of important news releases. Both Mr. Bracken's explanation to the House of Commons and the Russian explanation that the news was intended only for Russian consumption are, of course, disingenuous. They seem, as much as anything, a belated effort to salvage as much "face" as possible for the White House and the OWI.

Why did not Mr. Davis go to Cairo and to Teheran to take personal charge of the news arrangements? This was one of the purposes for which the Office of War Information was organized. The answer seems to be that the President did not want Mr. Davis at Cairo and Teheran, and so did not invite him to these meetings or even inform him of them. The President, who has shown a very realistic understanding of the value of news as an instrument of politics and government, wanted for his own reasons to break the news himself. In so doing he violated the spirit of his own executive order creating a central clearing agency for such news. And this time, for all his adroitness, the President has permitted himself to be tagged a good many yards off base. Mr. Davis' fault, of course, has been the meekness with which he has accepted this sort of interference and obstruction and his reluctance to force a showdown. If his face is now very red, this is not the first time it has been so.

THE PRAYING MANTIS

They found the praying mantis in the road.
They paused to wonder: each put down his load,
And one stuck out a twig for it to climb.
At last, ashamed, withholding blame or praise,
They left the praying mantis to its ways,
And went about their business. And there was
This single, tiny figure on the grass.
It looked this way, that way, watched the world pass—
Then bustled on the scattered twigs, and crossed
The road, smaller, smaller, undaunted, not lost.

The Soldiers' Vote Bill

By Mark Sullivan

Why It Perished

IT IS important to understand what the Senate did about soldier voting last week, and what follows.

The Senate set out to write a bill to provide for soldier voting—by Federal law as distinguished from State laws. When they set out, nearly the whole Senate believed that the bill, in some form, must and would be adopted. They believed that soldier voting could only be accomplished by Federal action—that action by the separate States would be unsatisfactory, because too cumbersome. Senators regretted this—but they accepted the condition. At all times, every Senator held to the objective that soldiers should be given opportunity to vote.

The debate was conducted, except as to a few details and a very few Senators, in a nonpartisan spirit. Again and again, Senators of both parties were on one side or the other of debated points. Practically every amendment proposed had the sincere purpose of really perfecting the bill, making it workable. The task was hard. For six days, the Senate worked with painstaking concentration.

Finally, the bill was made as perfect as it could be. And then—the bill was rejected. By a vote of 42 to 37, a substitute bill was adopted, which leaves soldier voting wholly to the States. The only Federal action is that the Army and Navy are directed to cooperate with the States in distributing ballots and the like.

WHY DID the Senate come to this conclusion? For one reason, six days of thorough debate revealed that the bill was unconstitutional—because it would put the conduct of an election, which is a function of the States, into the hands of the Federal Government. Senator Moore of Oklahoma declared, "I have not yet found a Senator who is even willing to say the bill is constitutional." Even Senators who supported the bill to the end knew it was unconstitutional—they justified their support on the ground, completely tenable, that the bill was a war measure, and as such could go counter to the Constitution. Besides, operation of the bill was limited to duration of the war.

In war, and for the duration, many bills are passed, quite properly, which in normal conditions would be unconstitutional. But in this case the constitutional question was peculiarly glaring and acutely dangerous. Here would be Governors and other State officials under mandate from the Federal Constitution and their own State constitutions, to do certain things—to conduct elections and do it in specified ways. And they would be under mandate from an act of Congress to do contrary things. The conflict would be absolutely certain to lead to contest in the courts, perhaps even a contested election to be thrown into Congress for decision. A contested presidential election has been regarded as a thing to fear and guard against, ever since the desperately dangerous Hayes-Tilden contest in 1876.

THERE WAS another reason for defeat of the Senate bill. It was itself as unsatisfactory as the State laws which it sought to supplant. The Senate bill applied only to the election of Federal officials—President, Vice President and members of Congress. It said nothing whatever about the election of the hundreds of local officials—Governors, other State officials, members of Legislatures, sheriffs and other county offices—who are to be elected next year. About these, the Senate bill did nothing. This was a glaring discrimination. The Senate, by its final action, concluded that the soldiers should have the same opportunity to vote for local officials as for Federal officials.

As matters stand now, soldier voting must be done under State laws. Practically all the States, 46 out of 48, have laws providing for absentee voting. But these laws—as they now stand—would not, in many cases, accommodate soldiers abroad. The time permitted—in some States as little as 20 days, preceding election date, is not enough for soldiers far abroad.

What the States must now do—in session of Legislatures the coming winter or in special sessions where necessary—is to modify their election laws so as to give soldiers abroad the opportunity to vote. Any State which fails to do so will be responsible for depriving its citizens, who are in the armed forces, of the opportunity to vote. Hardly any State—any Governor or State Legislature, or political party in a State—would take that responsibility.

Mine Workers

In the coal mines particularly, a strike every year has been the regular thing. It has not been disastrous simply because industry did not need the full production of the mines. Now full production is needed, the miners are afraid to trust their employers without the weapon of the strike, and the strike is now a public danger.

It seems foolish for the Government, now that it has again been obliged to take charge of the mines, to act merely as the agent of the private employers.

The Government has a good reputation as an employer. Why not offer permanent employment under civil service rules and hire qualified mine workers individually?

Value Of Conferences

By Paul Schubert

Travel Teaches

ONCE MORE the leaders have met. With unavoidable and perhaps unfortunate fanfare, the top politicos, the top generals and admirals and airmen have traveled long journeys to sit down together and discuss the problems of winning a war and organizing a world.

We still consider it remarkable for such men to make these journeys. We still suffer, here on this earth, from the universal curse of sovereignty and from the habits of feudalism, which surrounded each monarch with jealously guarded prerogatives. If "we" went to "them," it was a sign that "they" were "our" superior.

Even though "we" has become "we the people," we have clung to the idea of a President (and a nation) immolated in cotton wool. It is all right for "businessmen," in this day of transportation, to meet in Cairo or Calcutta to discuss their international problems—that's "modern." It was a radical departure for President Theodore Roosevelt to visit the Panama Canal. For President Wilson to go abroad was so unprecedented that many Americans disapproved heartily.

WE CAN THANK the circumstances that have led to the extraordinary sequence of meetings between President Franklin Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill—and now President Chiang Kai-shek and Premier Stalin. They have made international conferences of this kind seem both normal and desirable—which they are.

To be sure, the brilliant success of these conferences is not, of itself, an argument that such conferences must "succeed" because of the very fact that they take place.

On the contrary, it is merely evidence that these have been conferences between men who met in a reasonable state of mind, determined to succeed because the penalties of failure were too unpleasant to accept. When men desire to find a common meeting ground, barriers melt.

There were many international conferences held during the twenties and thirties, at which the conferees were all too obviously determined not to agree. We blush, today, to look at some of the futile wrangling about sizes and types of cruisers, about loans, debts and currency . . . we blush to think that the only points on which men could agree were meaningless generalities like the Briand - Kellogg pact, which proved only that many statesmen will set their signatures to paper in public falsehood. The world can blush, collectively, at the meetings of the League of Nations—the two-facedness, the hypocrisy.

One trouble with all the conferences "between wars," was the fact that they were held by professional conference-goers.

THE MEN WHO really counted, seldom got together.

In order to arrive at successful conference results, the men who meet must (1) clearly understand the penalties to the human race of failure to find solutions for humanity's problems, and (2) they must understand the other man's viewpoint, so that they can bridge the gaps caused by different mental attitudes.

It is interesting to speculate as to the possible effect on history, if a man like Adolf Hitler had been forced, by the nature of the office he took over, to do more traveling.

In an age of travel and intercourse, this man remained as provincial as a peasant. His prejudices became a menace to human civilization. His few meetings with Mussolini merely heightened these prejudices. He dictated the statesmanship of a great nation with reference to the United States, Britain and Russia, without the slightest first-hand knowledge of these powers.

This ignorant yokel actually thought America was weak—and to the tragedy of humanity, based his plans upon that assumption.

After 1918, many Germans naturally disliked any contact with "enemy" countries. I knew one German-Austrian, a veteran of 1917-1918, who traveled incessantly during the twenties and thirties—to Norway, Sweden, Finland, to all parts of Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Denmark . . . never to Italy or France. He had fantastically violent prejudices against the French—"dirty, faithless, decadent, immoral." He knew in advance that it was no use visiting France—this European neighbor of the French, to whom a visit to France was about as easy as a New Yorker's visit to Washington, D. C., In 1937 as an experiment, I took him along on a motor trip from Vienna, across Italy to France. The bait: not France, but "the Riviera." Characteristically, the thing that cracked his shell was the sight of French troops on the march. "Good men," he exclaimed. "They look just like our own lads." After forty-eight hours, he had swung to the opposite extreme of his earlier feelings, and had become a Francophile. May the Hitler of 1965 be a traveler—he may be a wiser man.

Victim Of Attacks

During the past 10 years Mr. Roosevelt has been a victim of attacks exceeding in some instances, even those hurled against fascism. The right to criticize anyone from the Chief Executive and Congress down to the smallest local official, has been a privilege which Americans have guarded jealously, a God-given right which we now are fighting to secure.

It also is an American privilege to expose those whose attacks against the President have been all venom and no praise. A good deal of just criticism has been fired at the President's domestic policies. Some of it has been ill-conceived and unjust. But, whatever faults the man may have, his conduct in foreign affairs and his remarkable leadership in awakening a slumbering Nation to the insidious forces which surrounded us from within and from without, by far overshadows his most glaring mistakes. Derivation Of Tojo

Being interested in the derivation of the name of Hideki Tojo, I recently consulted a Japanese dictionary to brush up on this language, which I have studied for several years. As most of your readers know, the majority of Japanese words are derived from Chinese, and even today there is a close similarity in the two languages.

I found the word Hideki was a composite word, Hid meaning to conceal, dek referring to December and i an abbreviation of ido or seven. Tojo means a wolf who masquerades as a lamb. Therefore, the literal translation would be: conceal (or hide) December 7—the masquerading wolf. There you have it—Hideki Tojo, December 7—Pearl Harbor!

House Inquiries

The other day your paper hit the nail on the head with an article headed "Tired to Death Irate Ickes Blasts House on Inquiries." You are right, we taxpayers are sick and tired of paying for the joy rides of these committees. They are nothing but a bunch of hooey. And the Senators and Congressmen that go on them just to reside in fine hotels, be wined and dined by mayors and the chamber of commerce who are afraid to do otherwise.

As an example, recently a subcommittee of the Naval Affairs of the House have been on four junket trips. C. G.

Explaining Subsidies

The mathematics of paying subsidies to hold down, or to reduce prices, aimed as a brake on inflation, is very simple.

Say the farmer or other producer has an item which he can afford to sell to the distributive system at 10 cents per unit. Assume, for the purpose of easy calculation, that the distributive costs are 100 per cent of the producer's price. The consumer would pay two times 10 cents or 20 cents for this item.

One way to pay a subsidy is to pay, say 5 cents to the retailer, bringing the consumers cost down to 15 cents. By this method the Government pays 100 per cent of the amount the consumer saves.

But suppose we pay the 5-cent subsidy to the farmer, reducing his sale price to the distributor from 10 cents to 5 cents. After the distributive costs of 100 per cent are added, we get a price to the consumer of 10 cents. By this method the consumer saves 10 cents for each 5 cents the Government pays in subsidies.

Apparently Congress cannot or does not want to see the issue this way. Apparently the representatives of the people are stooges for interests other than the consumer. How else can their attitude be explained?

Dog Lovers Beware

It is strange that so many dog lovers are trying to curb the efforts of those who want to adopt stringent methods to deal with the mad dog epidemic. Don't these people realize that their own pets are in danger of being exterminated?

An epidemic is too serious a matter to be influenced by the sentimentalists. If it is allowed to go unchecked, it may easily lead to panic. Washington is full of young girls who will desert it in droves if their welfare becomes seriously impaired. The consequences of such an exodus would have serious repercussions on all our fighting fronts.

The few steps which have already been taken have served to alleviate some of the danger. But the fact that people continue to be bitten by rabid animals proves that more vigorous methods must be adopted. These methods should be so strong as to assure the entire community of as rapid an end to the epidemic as possible.

Posting The Books

By J. M. Lalley

Nascitur, Non Fit

"A CERTAIN MEASURE: AN INTERPRETATION OF PROSE FICTION, by Ellen Glasgow. (Harcourt, Brace, $3.50.)

This is a collection of the prefaces that Miss Glasgow wrote for the special and limited edition of her principal novels, published five or six years ago by Scribner and sold by subscription. As presented here in a single volume, these papers offer something which is, as far as I know, unique—an important author's critical study of her own work. But it is also a confession of her artistic faith; and for Miss Glasgow, the art of the novelist has been something pretty close to a religion, since, as she says, it is only her life as a writer that has had reality to her.

The interest and value of the book lie in what it reveals of the intellectual and spiritual processes of a serious and self-conscious artist, as such. It is as full and as honest as such a revelation could well be; Miss Glasgow does her best to describe for us the psychological gestation and parturition of her novels, to tell us what parts observation, inheritance, reading, reverie and memory have played in the creation of each. And though she tells us very little, almost nothing, of her extraprofessional life, and nothing of her own emotional attitudes to persons or events, her confession has an almost embarrassing candor, such as is scarcely to be found in the frankest autobiographies. Miss Glasgow herself mentions in one place "the feeling of outraged reserve" that she has in writing about her books; and though she ascribes it to another reason, it must be to some extent because her books are, as she says, products of the deepest and most intimate part of herself.

Miss Glasgow is a novelist by vocation, in the stricter sense of the word. It was the life to which she believes herself to have been called by her nature and character, as other women have felt themselves called to the marriage-bed or to the cloister, and to which she has dedicated herself with that wholeness of purpose, of which perhaps only women—though certainly not all women—are capable. There is in the story of her artistic development, as she reveals it here, no point of crisis, no decisive accident which determined that she should be a writer and not something else. If Scott began to write novels because his lameness cheated him of a life of action, if Cooper began to write them merely to prove he could better another man's work, or Thackeray because he had lost his money and had failed at art, or Dickens because a publisher needed a printed text to put around another man's illustrations, or Trollope because it was more congenial and profitable than working in the postoffice, Miss Glasgow began writing them because it was the natural thing for her to do. "The truth is that I began being a novelist as naturally as I began talking or walking, so early that I cannot remember when the impulse first seized me."

To her work as a novelist Miss Glasgow could bring, besides the sense of vocation and an absolute devotion, a subtle sensibility and a strong, ironic intelligence. Because she was intelligent she could perceive, what so many have not perceived, how important it is for a novelist, especially a novelist primarily concerned with the influence of a rapidly changing society on manners and character, to have a philosophic viewpoint. She read widely in metaphysics and in the history of ideas and presently worked out, as she says, "a philosophy based on evolution," and evidently strongly influenced for a time by Darwin and Huxley; but in one of the prefaces she echoes Heraclitus, declaring in so many words that change is the only reality. Apparently, then, the function of the novelist is to observe the flux, to remember and out of his memory and meditation to epitomize the effects of the transition on the little world of his own characters. Because Miss Glasgow is both intelligent and sensitive she understood the primary importance of style to the art of the novelist, and how a style must be capable of being modified to suit not only character and situation, but also to suit the many possible angles from which they may be experienced. But she also understands that knowledge thus acquired is of value to the novelist only after it has been gathered into the deep wells of the subliminal self.

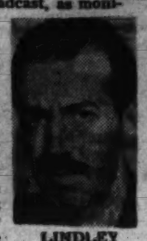
In all this we can find the secret of Miss Glasgow's great powers and of her one great and, I fear, fatal limitation. While conceiving human nature as perpetual flux, she has endeavored to find a point of rest where the artist can remain conscious of the flux, but be himself unaffected by it, where the novel can concern itself wholly with social change yet remain unchanged in its nature and function. Yet Miss Glasgow belongs to a line of novelists, including Henry James and Edith Wharton, who have themselves altered the function of the novelist from one of mere story telling and entertainment to one of satire and social criticism. And having herself cultivated irony at the sacrifice of passion, she is mildly outraged by those new novelists, those illiterates escaped from some Freudian cave, as she calls them, who have sacrificed both passion and irony to mere excitement and sensation or to scientific or political polemic, or to self-exhibition. She has, in fine, taken the novel more seriously than it ever deserved to be taken—not as a phenomenal aspect of the larger entity of literature, but as an entity and an end in itself.

Secret Weapons

By Ernest K. Lindley

Berlin's Threat Of Retaliation

LAST FRIDAY the Berlin radio broadcast a message which calls for more than passing notice. This broadcast, as monitored in London, said that the German high command "intends by one fell, drastic stroke to end the unbridled mass murder," and added that "mankind is not far from the point where it can at will blow up half the globe."



LINDLEY

For months German propaganda agencies have been spreading hints and promises of the use of new weapons. Their purpose would seem to be obviously to bolster the morale of German civilians and fighting forces. As the damage to German cities has mounted, the promises of eventual relief and of terrible retribution for Allied bombings become more sweeping. The rulers of the Reich fear also the impact of the declaration which they expect from the Teheran conference. If they were not worried about German morale, they would not need to assert that they are preparing drastic innovations in warfare. They would simply introduce the new weapons when they were ready. But it does not follow that their boasts are without substance.

Twice in the last 10 weeks Prime Minister Churchill has warned the people of Great Britain that there may be more than internal propaganda in these German allusions to new methods and new weapons. Actually, in the last four months several new German devices have appeared, notably the rocket-assisted glider, apparently guided by radio, and the anti-aircraft rocket. Both have proved troublesome but indecisive. Mr. Churchill clearly entertained the possibility of more far-reaching innovations, and especially their use in an attack on the British Isles. On November 8, Hitler said: "Whether you believe it or not, retribution will come. Thank God that although we cannot reach America today, I have one opponent within reach and will exact retribution from him."

THE BERLIN broadcast of Friday said or implied that:

(1) The Germans have developed a new instrument of war so effective that it will stop the bombing of the Reich "by one fell, drastic stroke;"

(2) The innovation is a super-explosive;

(3) It is being held in reserve for the moment when it can be used with decisive success. The broadcast went on to quote from the periodical, Das Reich. As reported in press dispatches from London, this passage said: "The commencement of retaliation no longer depends on technical matters, but solely on the object which is to be attained by it." Another translation transmitted by cable from London to the FCC in Washington read: "The question of the date of retaliation does not only depend on technical perfection but also on the purpose which is to be achieved by retaliation." According to the first version, all technical problems have been surmounted; according to the second, they may not have been. But according to both, the sense of the article was that Germany would soon introduce a new offensive weapon of revolutionary proportions.

Although the German broadcasts may well be exaggerated and probably are intentionally misleading as to detail, it would be a mistake to rule out the possibility that the German high command has something very sensational up its sleeve. Many of the instruments of war already in use are fantastic. The existence of others is known, at least in a general way: such as gas, which was used in the first World War, and germ warfare. Before the war, the scientists in their laboratories had unlocked the doors to other terrible wonders. The Berlin radio's reference to blowing up half the globe would seem, to a layman, to hint at progress in the release of atomic energy.

IF THE Germans have any such novelty as they claim, they probably will try to hold it, not until it has been perfected, but until they have it in sufficient quantity to produce a drastic result. Probably, it has been the fear of retaliation which has prevented them up to now from using gas. In his speech to the House of Commons on September 21, Mr. Churchill referred to "the prolonged careful examination beforehand that we have given to these possibilities" of the employment of new forms of attack on Great Britain. He may well have meant attention to means of retaliation as well as to means of defense. In such circumstances, the German high command might well try to defer the use of new methods—assuming that they have been perfected—until it could organize an attack designed to knock out Great Britain or shatter the morale of the British people. Owing to greater size and distance, both Russia and the United States would be less immediately vulnerable than Britain to an all-out surprise attack by new means.

If Germany fights on, it may be not only because the Nazi leaders themselves can gain nothing from capitulation, but because the professional high command believes it can strike a mighty counteroffensive blow with new instruments. We must be braced for developments which will inject into the war violence and destruction of property and life hitherto almost inconceivable to the layman and which may make it a war of survival, in the starkest, most literal physical sense.

3 U. S. Groups Try to Perfect Rocket Plane

By the Associated Press

Today's planes have just about reached their speed limits and scientists now are striving to perfect an airship without tail or propeller which can streak through the air like a rocket.

A "flying wing" of this type may emerge from the laboratory stage "in the not too distant future," says Dr. H. L. Dryden of the United States Commerce Department.

Three Groups at Work

The aerodynamics expert said three different groups, well financed, are working on the proposition and have found that the problem of distributing weight has been one of the big difficulties.

Jet production—power provided by sharp gusts such a rockets produce—is the principle behind the propellerless plane.

Scientists the world over for many years have been seeking to apply the rocket or jet propulsion theories to aircraft. Research has been intensified by the war.

Much of the pioneer work is already done.

Many Patents Issued

An Italian experimental plane powered this way is reported to have flown a considerable distance. Numerous patents involving the principles have been issued in the United States and in other countries.

"The propeller does very well in speeds up to, say, 400 to 500 miles per hour," said Dr Dryden. "Beyond that range, difficulties may be expected. Ultimately we may look for the propellerless plane. So radical a development is not likely to come quickly. In the midst of war, with an entire industry geared to produce enormous numbers of conventional aircraft power plants, it would not be possible to switch to a wholly different form of propulsion."

The flying wing is "coming along," though not yet "out of the woods," he added.

Steinbeck Tells Why 87 Heavily-Armed Nazis Backed Away From Island-Invading Force of 5

By John Steinbeck

There are times when the element of luck is so sharply involved in an action that sense of dread sets in afterward. And such was the invasion of the Island of Ventotene by five men in a whaleboat. They knew there was a German radar crew on the island, but they did not know that it numbered 87 men, all heavily armed with machine guns. They did not know that this crew had ammunition and food stored to last six weeks. All the men in the whaleboat did know was that the Italians had put up three white flares in the night as a token of surrender.

The main harbor of Ventotene is a narrow inlet that ends against a cliff like an amphitheater, and on this semicircular cliff the town stands high above the water. To the left of this inlet there is a pier and a little breakwater, unconnected with the land and designed to keep the swells from breaking on the pier, and finally to the left of the pier there is another inlet very like the true harbor, which however is no harbor at all.

The whaleboat with the five men in it approached the dark island and when it was close to the shore the commander shone a flashlight quickly and it showed a deep inlet. Naturally, he thought this was a harbor, and the little boat coasted easily into it. Then the light flashed on again and ranged about, only to discover that this was not the true harbor at all but the false inlet.

Third Try Successful

The whaleboat put about and headed out again and soon it came to where what looked like a sand bar stuck out of the water. And again the light flashed out, and it was seen that it was a breakwater. Again the boat proceeded, but approximately 10 minutes had been consumed in being slightly lost. The third try was successful and the little boat found the entrance of the true harbor and nosed into it. And just as the whaleboat put its head into the little harbor an explosion came from behind the breakwater, and there was the sound of running feet, and then from the top of the cliff there came another big explosion, and then progressively back on the hill more and more blasts.

German Surrenders

There was nothing to do then but to go ahead. The whaleboat plunged into the pier and the five men leaped out. Behind the breakwater lay a German E-boat and beside her stood a German soldier. He had just thrown a potato-masher grenade at the E-boat to destroy and sink her. One of the American officers ran at him, and with one motion the German ripped out his Luger pistol and tossed it in the water and then put both of his hands over his head. The lancing light of a powerful flashlight circled him. The officer who had taken him rushed him to the whaleboat and put him under guard of the boat's engineer.

Now a crowd of Italians came swarming down from the hill crying "Surrender, surrender!" and as they came they dropped their rifles on the ground, in an unholy heap. The commodore pointed to a place on the quay. "Stack them there," he said. "Get everything you have and stack it right there."

Lights Crisscross Landing

Now the landing was crisscrossed with lights. The five Americans stood side by side with their guns ready, while the Italian Carabinieri brought their guns and put them in a pile. Every one seemed to be confused and glad and frightened. The people wanted to crowd close to see the Americans and the same time the ugly pig snouts of the tommy-guns warned them back. It is not reassuring to be one of five men who are ostensibly holding a line against 250 men, even if those men seem to have surrendered.

Every one of the Italians was talking. No one was listening. And no one wanted to listen. And then breaking through their ranks came a remarkable figure, a tall, gray-haired old man dressed in pink pajamas. He stalked through the chattering, shouting ranks of the Carabinieri and he said, "I speak English." Immediately the shouting stopped and the ring of faces showed intensely in the flashlight beams. "I have been a political prisoner here for three years," the old man said. For some reason he did not seem funny in his pink pajamas. He had a great dignity, even enough to offset his costume.

The commodore asked, "What were those explosions?"

"The Germans," the old man said. "There are 87 of them. They were set up with machineguns to fire on you when you entered the harbor, but when you landed troops in the false harbor and when you landed more troops on the breakwater, they thought they might be surrounded, so they retreated. They are dynamiting as they go."

"When we landed troops?" The commodore began, and then he shut himself off. "Oh, yes. I see," he said. "Yes, when we landed troops." One of the officers shivered and grinned at the commodore.

"I wish those paratroopers would come in about now," he said.

"I wouldn't mind it either," the commodore replied. And he went on to the old man in the pajamas, "Where will the Germans go?"

Radar Station Blown Up

"They'll go to their radar station to destroy it. Then they have some entrenchments on the hill. I think they will try to hold them there." And at that moment there came a very large explosion and a fire started back on the hill, a fire large enough so that it illuminated the little dock and the entrance to the bay. "That will be the radar station now," the old man said. "They are very thorough. Too bad the troops you landed didn't get there first."

"Yes," said the commodore, "isn't it."

More Italians came down the hill then and deposited their arms. They seemed to be very glad to let them go. Apparently they had never loved their guns very much.

On the dock the five Americans stood uneasily and the safety catches were off their guns, and their eyes moved restlessly among the Italians. The firelight from the burning buildings high on the hill made deep shadows in back of the dock houses.

The commodore said softly, "I wish those paratroopers would get here. If Jerry finds out there are only five of us, I wouldn't give any odds on us."

And then there was a sound of a boat's motor and the commodore smiled with relief. The forty-three paratroopers were coming in to the shore. "Give them a light, coxswain," the commander called. "Show them where to come."

Tests Prove New Jap Guns Inaccurate

The War Department reported yesterday that tests of the latest Japanese rifle and light machine gun show they are inaccurate at long range.

Tests conducted at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., and at six arsenals, the Army said, prove that the new Japanese rifle, a manually operated bolt-action weapon with an increased bore of .303 caliber, is inaccurate at a range of more than 350 yards.

The Japanese light machine gun can fire 30 rounds in three seconds, the Army added, but the effective rate of fire is reduced to 200 to 300 rounds per minute and at 500 yards does not compare in accuracy with the American .30 caliber Browning which fires 500 to 600 rounds a minute.

Experts of the Ordnance Department obtained this information from captured enemy arms in their search for information about the latest enemy equipment.

Approximately 1100 major types of German and Japanese equipment comprising about 600,000 separate items, are under examination not only to determine characteristics but also effectiveness against American tanks and armored vehicles, the Army said.

After ordnance analysis of the captured weapons they are shipped to Army training centers for scrutiny by American troops.

3 Allied Cargo Ships Sunk In Renewal of U-Boat Warfare

By the Associated Press

Destruction of three United Nations merchant ships in the Caribbean area during November, announced last week by the 15th United States Naval Headquarters, indicated resumption of U-Boat warfare in these waters on the heaviest scale in recent months. At least 26 lives were lost in the attacks.

The Navy also announced that a medium-sized Norwegian ship had been torpedoed and sunk by an Axis submarine in the South Pacific late in October.

The four losses raised the toll of U-Boat sinkings in the western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor to 695 Allied and neutral ships.

In the Caribbean attacks the loss of life included 16 aboard an American Liberty ship, 10 on an American tanker and an undisclosed number on a Panamanian freighter overdue and presumed lost.

The overdue vessel may be the Panamanian steamer Pompoon, whose possible loss was cited two weeks ago by Bogota authorities when they announced that a U-Boat had sunk the Colombian motor schooner Ruby with four lives lost.

Loss of the Ruby, announced on November 26, was the first announced sinking in the Caribbean area in slightly more than four months.

Hobbs Urges Bill For Voluntary Crime Confessions

Urging enactment of his bill to validate voluntary confessions in criminal cases where arraignment of defendants has been delayed, Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama yesterday said the judicial confusion growing out of the Supreme Court decision in the McNabb case would not be remedied by Attorney General Biddle's proposal for legislation to standardize arraignment procedure in Federal jurisdictions.

Biddle Saturday went before a House Judiciary Subcommittee considering the Hobbs bill, and urged as an alternative proposal that Congress supplant the varying statutory requirements as to time of arraignment with a uniform law providing for bringing prisoners before a magistrate within a reasonable time.

Hobbs said he felt in accord with the principle of uniformity but that he feared such a statute 'shou supplement rather than be substituted for my pending bill."

100 Homeless After Atlantic City Fire

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 5 (AP).—Smoke curled today from a block-long jumble of debris after a general alarm blaze which cost the life of a city fireman, made 100 persons homeless, and leveled more than two dozen buildings.

Twenty-four stores, two apartment houses, two restaurants and several other buildings were wiped out along the Boardwalk and on Maryland ave. Damage was put at $500,000.

What About Gold?

By Roger W. Babson

Outlook Favors Mining Shares

Currency stability will be most essential to a maintenance of trade and revival of business activity in the postwar period. Capital naturally gravitates to the countries which give it the best reception and which hold out the most return for its use. If the United States, Britain Russia and China are to function as well together in peace as they have in war, they must all be anchored to a stable currency. This would enable these countries to encourage, rather than to discourage, the employment of capital.

Changing values in money bring great personal hardships. They also disorganize and retard all economic progress. In the hesitancy of the investor, in the uncertain moves of business, in the fear of labor and in the ineffectiveness of legislation, we see continually growing signs of distrust in the value of our dollar. In terms of prewar values, today's dollar is now worth 75 cents. As inflation increases and under our present system of managed currency, I can visualize in the next five or six years a dollar worth perhaps only 35 cents.

After the last war, during the twenties and the thirties, the business interests in Germany, France and Central Europe were paralyzed because of the rapid changes in the value of their currencies. Good money and sound trade are boon companions. Poor money and even fear that money will became less valuable causes waste and panic. The most prosperous times and the period in which trade and industry advanced the most both here and abroad were when the British pound and the American dollar were tied to a gold standard. Then they were exchangeable for a definite amount of gold of a definite weight and fineness.

I doubt if gold soon circulates again as money. I believe, however, that a world-wide bank or gold corporation may be organized with actual gold in the form of coin or bullion as its capital. Private capital will then be encouraged to finance postwar trade and business. If such capital became frightened, this "International Bank" could guarantee any loans. It could also make loans on its own account to private business to cover goods in transit. Like our Federal Reserve System it might prove a highly profitable and useful enterprise.

Dr. Harry D. White of our Treasury Department and John Maynard Keynes, the British money authority, have both proposed plans for the stabilization of international currencies. The White plan favors an actual gold fund. This Keynes idea is highly inflationary. At the moment the White proposal looks the best. Unquestionably, a bank plan will be worked out with most of the 25 United Nations' governments.

In World War I it was gold, not currency, which Colonel Lawrence used in order to win the support of Arab tribesmen. History repeated itself when our own Gen. Mark Clark landed in Africa with a bag of gold. Gold will always talk when no other form of money is effective. That a natural demand for gold exists today is shown by the price of gold in the Bombay and Cairo markets where it is selling for almost double the United States price of $35. This strengthens my belief that international currencies, including our own, will be further reduced in value. This would mean further monetary inflation and a rise after World War II of consumer inflation followed by even more monetary inflation.

Countries in which gold will freely circulate as a medium of exchange will be the best off. Countries which attempt to get along with some form of managed currency will be in the worst shape. Hence, we should ultimately have in some form a currency which even if the circumstances were restricted would be exchangeable for gold. Thus, I predict that our present managed money system is on the way out.

More money has probably been lost through speculating in gold shares than in any other stocks. On a long-term basis, however, I now favor stocks of gold mining companies which were profitably producing before World War II. During the war, gold is subordinate in importance to nickel and copper and to the products of many other mines. In view of this, and the manpower shortage, nearly 60 per cent of the mines in the United States, Canada and South Africa have shut down. The remaining are operating on a greatly reduced basis, in fact gold production in United States and Canada is less than at anytime in 100 years.

After the war, when all efforts are turned to stimulating world trade, gold may prove the only medium through which international payments can be made. Thus, gold may rise in value in terms of our present currency. Furthermore, as restrictions are lifted with respect to manpower and materials, after the war there should be a return of earning power to the gold industry.

Certainly it is no time to sell gold stocks. New purchases should be confined to producing companies with the best ore rating whose over-all cost of production is reasonably low.

Ickes Expects Oil Shortage Next Spring

Interior Secretary Ickes said yesterday the petroleum transportation problem will be largely overcome by next spring but that the trouble then will be a shortage in the domestic supply.

Ickes, petroleum administrator for war, said imports in greater volume than prewar days would have to be made because the home output will not meet requirements. He gave no figures.

By spring, petroleum transportation projects including pipelines will be completed, providing for the East Coast an overland capacity of about 1,625,000 barrels daily, he said.

Ralph K. Davies, deputy PAW administrator, said the Big Inch pipeline is reaching capacity flow.

"In early 1941 pipe line transportation of oil to the Eastern States amounted to about 42,000 barrels a day," he said. "Today this underground flow exceeds 475,000 barrels a day; by spring the flow is scheduled to advance to about 700,000 barrels a day."

With the mounting pipe line flow, Davies adde , tank car shipments to the East have been reduced to less than 800,000 barrels daily. This permitted diversion of 8000 tank cars to Midwest and California runs.

Motor truck haulage of oil increased to a point where 25,000 tank cars could be transferred from short haul to long haul movement.

Inland waterway transportation has been boosted from 64,000 barrels daily in April, 1942, to 168,000 barrels.

Farm Labor Club Recruiting Now For Next Harvest

Cooperation of Government agencies, business establishments, schools, and social organizations in a recruiting drive for 25,000 volunteer farm workers next harvest has been assured, J. W. Jones, labor recruiting officer, said yesterday.

Ready to enlist the help of District residents who would work on a farm "for a month, week, or day," the Farm Labor Club of Maryland and Virginia has been organized to register all volunteers and have a roster ready next fall.

Jones, who works in cooperation with the Maryland and Virginia Extension Service, has established his office at the United States Employment Service, 501 K st. nw.

NEW YEAR RESERVATIONS have already been taken for the Chateau Internationale of the Old New Orleans by Henry Kaiser, the shipbuilder, and Dr. M. G. Gibbs, head of the Peoples Drug Stores. This comes under the head of nothing less than wonderful—because the Chateau Internationale is still in the throes of construction, won't be open for three weeks, at least. It's going to be quite uppity, with admission at all times only to those holding reservations.

A-boiling is the Latin blood of Chago Rodriguez of Treasure Island. Because someone swiped his portrait (made by Barnaby Conrad, new vice consul to Spain) from the spot's lobby. Have a heart, you klepto, whoever you are, and bring it back before Chago has a stroke.

GLAMOUR UNLEASHED pervaded the Mayflower Lounge when Cornelius Vanderbilt swung out on the dance floor with a Vargas-slim brunette in lipstick red. Next night we saw 'em in the Statler's Embassy Room revolving to Pancho's strains.

PRESS AGENT KEN BURGHER must be trying to make his femme clients the most furiously envied women in town. Recent Burgher screeds say that Bernice Parks of the Club Jalna has 16 fur coats and that the contract of Nora Williams of the Windsor Room calls for three steaks a week in addition to her salary.

It's a new revue at the Lotus today. Stars are dancers Edwards and Argela; Marshall Rogers, the musical glasses man; George Rochey, former acrostepper with Benny Davis' revue.

DUKE ELLINGTON, who'll play his own compositions in his concert at Uline's Arena tonight

RICH WITH PLUMS of entertainment are today and tomorrow. "Stardust Night" goes on at Restaurant "400" tonight. There'll be a full house of smart amateurs. . . . Beginning tomorrow afternoon the Neptune Room will present the "Strings of Swing," Ciano and Curcuerra, in addition to Lee and Leslie Miller. . . . And Alan Gale, that "funniest little feller," will finally arrive at Paul Young's tomorrow night.

AMONG THE ACES. Chubby Owen and black-browed Parker are taking Troika like the Marines took the Gilberts. Looks as though they'll be there for a long time. Listen for their new song, "Ways to Win the War." . . . Imogene Coca, a brisk little wisp of a person, has the midnighters in stitches at Olmsted's. She's been highly praised by Brooks Atkinson. . . . Yourlo and Yoder at the Balalaika are doing a Russian sailor dance with the grace of true ballet artists and the elastic bounce of a pair of rubber balls.

Helen and Kitty Rose, juggling clownettes at Casino Royal, are mother and daughter. And papa, if you please, is "Upside-Down Emanuel," who starred at C. R. a few months ago.

STAFF ANGLES. Biggest mixologist in town is Eric of El Patio. He's 6 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 250 pounds. And he used to work for Mary Pickford. . . . Maitre d'Hotel Joseph Robbens of the Roosevelt Hotel has expertly revised the Victory Room menus, made some smart changes in service. . . . The red-headed majordomo of Restaurant "823" in the late evening hours is Jack Phelan. . . . Charles A. Cummings, who mingles tact and cordiality so expertly in greeting all comers at the Lounge Riviera, used to be the maitre d'hotel at the Chamberlin, famous resort hostelry of Old Point Comfort.

Jennifer Jones in Idyllic Title Role of 'The Song of Bernadette'

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Popular Star Resumes Her Interrupted Career; Theater News and Gossip

THERE IS at least one mate with whom his public demands that Johnny Weissmuller shall remain inseparable.

That one is Maureen O'Sullivan, who appeared with him in the "Tarzan" pictures until the public reached the point where it would accept no other. So the canny Sol Lesser has articled Miss O'Sullivan to return to the screen to play her famous role of Jane, along, of course, with Johnny, Johnny Sheffield, as Boy, and Chita, the Chimp, the combination that has thrilled audiences the world over in the fabulous Edgar Rice Burroughs stories of life in the jungle.

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN

Miss O'Sullivan last appeared in the series in "Tarzan's New York Adventures." She has been "written out" of subsequent releases, but her invisible identity preserved through the medium of letters received by Tarzan. The life of that subterfuge has now run its course.

Miss O'Sullivan departed the series, and all other work before the cameras, when her husband, Comdr. John V. Farrow, was invalided home from the armed forces and given little chance of ultimate recovery. Sacrificing her own career, she nursed him back to health and remained by his side constantly as he made his remarkable recovery and reestablished himself as a director by turning out the memorable "Wake Island" and other later successes.

Maureen O'Sullivan will rate a right smart round of applause when her image again flashes up there on the screen.

So will Mr. Lesser, if he carries out present plans for the number now in preparation, with Morton Grant as scenarist and Kurt Neuman tagged as director. This one will be decorated by the presence of 50 of Hollywood's most beautiful girls and one of its special features will be a huge aquatic carnival. The title, appropriately enough, will be "Tarzan and the Amazons"—meaning those half-hundred home-wrecking wenches.

Another comeback—although that is not precisely what Miss O'Sullivan's is—will be Bryant Washburn's under the terms of a new term-contract with RKO-Radio to which he has just put the pen. One of the outstanding stars of the silent era, Washburn's first assignment under the new paper will be to an important role with Rosalind Russell in "Elizabeth Kenny." The last time I saw him "in the flesh," which was not too long ago, he still looked like a juvenile.

Global Gelatins

Glancing over the list of their impending bookings, the boys in the local Warner offices have drawn the wrath of the U. S. Navy by adopting "Buy a ticket to the Earle and see the world" as their immediate slogan. The highly explosive "In Old Oklahoma," breaking out on the Earle screen come Friday, with John Wayne and Martha Scott costarred, will be followed by Errol Flynn and Julie Bishop—no relation to Miss Scott's "Cheers for"—in "Northern Pursuit," a gaudy saga of the Northwest Mounted. After that, "Destination Tokyo," with Cary Grant and John Garfield—and don't ask what that is about! With that vanishing release date now set for some time early in the new year, "Desert Song" is penciled in as a costarrer for Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning and the vehicle for another jaunt in the African sands, and on the heels of that one, Humphrey Bogart and Sydney Greenstreet will book you for "Passage to Marseille." Getting home, you will be allowed to open the "Saratoga Trunk," carried by Gary Cooper and Ingrid Bergman, who had something to do with "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Comfortable way to indulge your wanderlust!

It is pleasant to report that Julie Haydon has won her considerable bout with the little bugs that spread the flu. After having been confined to her hotel both Thursday and Friday by a high temperature and practically nonexistent voice, she returned to her role of Patsy Jefferson in "The Patriots" on Saturday, at the National.

Dots and Dashes

"Children of Mars," thirteenth release in RKO-Radio's "This Is America" series, was screened last Friday for the Special Senate Subcommittee on Wartime Health and Education, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebraska) presiding . . . After the screening, Frank Donovan, author and director of the picture, pointed out the importance of it, and others like it, as a guide to community action in the matter of juvenile delinquency . . . Senator Pepper paid tribute to the screen in these words: "Not since the beginning of time has anything been invented which is so effective in influencing public opinion as the sound picture" . . . The St. Paul Players are holding open tryouts for parts in "Quality Street" in their auditorium, 1421 V st. nw., Wednesday night, December 8, at 8:30 . . . Production planned for second week in February . . . Helen Howe, distinguished diseuse, will present a program of her original character sketches in the Congressional Room at the Hotel Statler, on Tuesday, December 14, at 8:30 p. m. . . . Auspices: Church Service League, Church of the Epiphany . . . That Dunninger broadcast from the Capitol stage last night WAS broadcast coast-to-coast . . . Only WMAL was prevented from piping it in, so will rebroadcast it tonight, 10:30 to 11 . . . So, if you're in it, you still can hear yourself—which was the whole point, anyway.

If-Not-There-Already Note

According to Keith's, we'll all be going to the "Crazy House" by Thursday!

Acting His Age

Guy Sorel, who plays Alexander Hamilton in "The Patriots," Sidney Kingsley's prize play now at the National in its second and final week, is delighted to be portraying the role of a man approximately his own age—29. Hamilton, at the period of "The Patriots," was in his early 30's. By way of contrast, in his first Broadway drama, "In Time to Come," Sorel, then 27, portrayed the octogenarian Clemenceau.

Double Bill at Pix

Mystery and comedy-romance are offered in the current double bill at the Pix, with "Sherlock Holmes Faces Death" and "Always a Bridesmaid" the two halves of the duplex diversion.

The former stars, of course, Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce in a modernized version of the Arthur Conan Doyle story "Musgrave Manor." Although it is brought up to date, the adapters have resisted the temptation to make the criminals Axis spies, as has previously been done, and the story sticks closely to the original.

"Always a Bridesmaid" stars the sweet-singing Andrews Sisters with the Jivin' Jacks and Jills for additional musical interest. Grace McDonald and Patric Knowles contribute the romance. Charles Butterworth and Billy Gilbert contrastingly take care of the comedy.

Labor Film at Lux

Crowded as the news section is with timely and important events, "The Labor Front," a new release in the "World in Action" series, will take uppermost place in the minds of many on this week's bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, as a short subject of unusual significance.

It is no short-range view of the labor problem that is essayed here, but a world-wide view of the manpower situation as it affects all countries. Films from Germany and conquered nations compete for top interest with others from Russia, China, Great Britain and the United States. The scenes depict the extremes of vast unemployment and the present full use of all skills in the global war efforts. It is something to see.

The news coverage is characteristically comprehensive and complete, with telling shots from all points of the compass and many domestic events of immediate concern, including sports.

"Farmer Gene Sarazen," a Personality-Oddity," "Basketeers," a sports short, and Walt Disney's "The Old Army Game," Donald Duck's latest cartoon absurdity, complete the bill.

LEONARD LYONS

Notes and Anecdotes of Manhattan

New York, Dec. 5.—A few weeks ago, in General Sessions, prizefighter Terry Young was convicted of robbery and sent to Sing Sing. Young, who still is in his 20's, fought in Madison Square Garden a few times. . . . Yesterday, in Brooklyn's County Court, before Judge Samuel Leibowitz, John Longo was convicted of burglary. Longo, under another name, was a fighter who also had fought at Madison Square Garden. In fact, one of his Garden bouts was against Terry Young. . . . And so at Sing Sing prison, where Longo is going, the inmates will soon witness a return match between two Madison Square Garden fighters, now both members of the same club.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY

The New York City Center of Music and Drama is being underwritten by the most conglomerate citizens of the town. The backers include John D. Rockefeller and Joe Curran of the National Maritime Union, Marshall Field and Local 802 of the Musicians Union, and the warring unions, the Amalgamated and the ILGWU. In addition, a stranger approached Newbold Morris, president of the City Council, told Morris he liked the idea of a Center, and contributed $2500 . . . Morris also approached George McLaughlin, head of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who finally decided: "The Dodgers lost, and I like winners. Maybe this'll be a winner. Count me in."

When RCA-Victor released the new "Metropolitan Revivals" album, the billing decided upon was "Enrico Caruso and an All-Star Cast"—although the other voices are those of Tettrazini, Hempel, Scotti, Farrar and Alda . . . It was Caruso who insisted that, at the Met, names and not voices drew the applause. To prove his assertion, Caruso one night substituted for a minor singer whose role called for him to sing, unseen, from the wings. Caruso sang it from the wings, and not one handclap rewarded the world's most famous tenor. "See? I was right. This proves my point," said Caruso—who then was depressed by it for a week.

Some New Yorkers fighting in Italy were welcomed by some of their former Manhattan bootleggers. The bootleggers had been reported to Italy after they served their prison terms here . . . Elliott Nugent, the actor-director, is wearing all of Robert Montgomery's clothes. Lieut. Comdr. Montgomery gave them to Nugent when he entered the Navy . . . Pvt. Archie Robbins, who plays the m. c. in cabaret scene of "Winged Victory," changes his m. c. routine regularly, the way he did when he was a nightclub m. c. Pvt. Harry Horner, who did the sets, is busy designing smaller sets, in preparation for the 1945 tour of the show.

Comdr. John Raby, USN, who, flying the new Hellcat, led the aviation groups in both the Marcus and Wake Island raids, was in town last week. Commander Raby, who holds the Navy Cross and has served all over the world, also saw action at the invasion of Casablanca. The other night Raby's left leg was in a plaster cast. He wore no Purple Heart ribbon because his injury wasn't a result of any of the amazing engagements in which he has participated. His leg was broken when, after the Wake Island raid, he made his report to Admiral Nimitz, and then, in leaving the Admiral's office, Raby tripped and fell.

The British book publishers have been so careful in their paper conservation that two London book reviewers returned Daphne DuMaurier's small and marginless novel to the publishers because the print was too small for them to read . . . Maurice Maeterlinck has been ordered by his physician to go South before the cold weather sets in. But he can't get a train reservation . . . The First Division Rangers, who make their throat-slitting raids in scattered groups of two and three, are so tough that when any of them is asked: "Haven't I met you?" the answer is: "Maybe. What part of Hell are you from?"

You'd Never Guess!

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

FORMER GOVERNOR Alf Landon of Kansas had ample opportunity to open up on Wendell Willkie, had he been so minded, at his closed-door meeting with freshmen GOP Congressmen. However, Landon diplomatically held his fire, much to the disappointment of anti-Willkieites present.

Representative Howard Buffett of Nebraska blew the whistle on Willkie at the very start of the meeting, introducing Landon as "a man who was neither a Socialist nor a Democrat before he received the Republican presidential nomination, nor a New Dealer or bomber traveler afterward."

Landon first read a prepared and rather dull diatribe denouncing New Deal domestic policies and warning Republicans against endorsing Roosevelt's Soviet-collaboration "until we know all the facts about the Moscow conference." Having finished this, he was peppered with provocative questions about Willkie.

Representative Louis Ebenezer Miller of Missouri inquired if Landon "ever intended to write a travelogue." The Kansan grinned this one off. He answered most other questions regarding Willkie in monosyllables and refused to mention Willkie by name at any time. However, he uncorked one indirect blast when asked if anyone had the Republican nomination "in the bag," a claim Willkie reportedly made when he addressed the GOP freshmen some weeks back.

"That's perfectly absurd, and I don't care who said it," Landon replied. "No one can say at this time who will be the party nominee in 1944."

Almost Secretary of War

LANDON WAS HIS usual colorless self and the meeting dragged badly in spots. However, all ears pricked up when the Kansan gave an inside account of how he was "almost appointed" Secretary of War during the 1940 campaign.

He had received a feeler on the Cabinet appointment from Frank Altschul of New York, relative of former Governor Lehman. When Landon evinced interest, Altschul, according to Landon, arranged a White House luncheon at which the matter was to be talked over. However, Landon chose this moment to issue a public blast against a third term for Roosevelt and the luncheon was called off.

This was in June, 1940, shortly before Frank Knox was named Secretary of the Navy and Henry Stimson became Secretary of War. According to Landon, Knox authorized him to issue a statement stating that both he and Landon would refuse Cabinet appointments.

"I told Frank Knox that he should make his own statement," Landon revealed. "I had called a press conference for 3:30 in the afternoon to make my announcement and suggested to Knox that he meet the press at 4."

At the last minute, Knox changed his mind. Later, he told Landon that he was convinced Roosevelt wouldn't run for a third term. According to Landon, Knox asked the President bluntly if he would run again, "My nerves wouldn't stand it," the President told Knox, according to Landon.

"The President phoned me long-distance when I returned to Kansas and apologized for canceling the luncheon," Landon added. "He said that it had only been postponed and invited me to the White House the next time I came to Washington."

However, there were no more feelers regarding a Cabinet post, the Kansan remarked. Shortly afterward, Henry Stimson was named Secretary of War.

Protecting the President Abroad

THE ONLY PEOPLE in the U.S.A. who are really made unhappy by the President's travels—especially overseas—are the Secret Service. They spend sleepless nights until he comes home again, worried that something may happen.

On last winter's overseas junket to Casablanca, an extraordinary measure of protection was taken. Nothing like it has ever been seen in the history of the world. A great armada of ships of all kinds, mostly fighting ships, was assembled near the bulge of Brazil, and also near the bulge of West Africa. The ships moved out along the path which the President was to follow and practically covered every square mile of the Atlantic at this narrow crossing.

The President himself was flying overhead in a Pan American clipper, and the purpose of the ships was to form what the Navy called a "net" of protection. It was to serve the President as the net in the circus serves the trapeze artists. If the President's plane were forced down into the sea, no matter where, there would be at least one ship at that spot to rescue him.

No such plan was used on his latest trip, however. The mode of protection cannot now be revealed, but when the story is told, it will show an entirely different strategy.

Capital Chaff

Diplomatic grapevine reports that the State Department is in for a delightful satire in Sidney Baron's forthcoming book, "One Whirl." Those who have peeped at advanced proofs say the appeasement boys won't like it . . .

Ohio's Republican Congressman Rowe says that Ohioans are determined that one of their favorite sons—either Taft or Bricker get the GOP nomination for this reason: Victory in the election would make Ohio the mother of Presidents. At present, Ohio and Virginia are tied with seven Presidents each. Ohio wants one more . . . Incidentally, Rowe says colleagues reported him erroneously to the effect that he thought Willkie could carry the Akron labor area as against Bricker. It's the other way around, says Rowe.

Two of a Kind

IF FOR NOTHING ELSE, departing Senator Bob Reynolds of North Carolina will be missed for his likeness to Huey Long. When Long was alive, the two men were a pair of leather-lunged rabble-rousers such as the Senate may never see again.

Both were elected in 1932, they met as Senators in a Washington hotel. The Senator from Louisiana looked at the Senator from North Carolina and said, "Don't I know you from some place?"

"Not to my remembrance," Reynolds replied.

"You been to Baton Rouge, ain't you?" Long insisted.

Reynolds acknowledged he had.

"Why, then, sure I know you," said Huey. "You used to run that roller-skating rink down there."

Reynolds brightened. "That's right. And now I know you. You used to come in and win all the prizes for fancy skatin'. That's when you were down there sellin' snake oil."

Giants Upset 'Skins, 14-10, Stay in Running

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Dec. 5.—It's a beautiful day at the Polo Grounds and the Giants are the first team to trot on the field. They are trying to get ahead in the world by the very complicated method of beating the Redskins today in New York and next week in Washington. If they beat the Redskins twice they will tie the Redskins for the Eastern championship, which somehow doesn't quite sound right.

POVICH

Well, the Giants made a pretty good start, at that. They won the toss. The Giants choose to kick off, and 1500 Washington fans among the 60,000 in the joint couldn't think of a better choice.

Sammy Baugh is back to pass on the second play of the game and right now he must feel like he got mixed up in a one-way street. All the traffic is coming toward him and he is being smeared by 32. Yep, it's a 4-yard loss for Baugh. We hastily identify No. 32 as Al Blozis, the Georgetown Giant who used to set shot-putting records.

Baugh can think of something better to try than another pass at this time so he quick-kicks and a bit later into the game come the offensive backs of Coach Steve Owens. They are Tuffy Leemans and Ben Paschal and right away they start getting offensive to the Redskins.

Paschal has just legged that ball four straight times for the Giants. No, make it five. Now you can make it six, with the Giants doing very well indeed. Paschal makes it a first down on the Redskins' 30. Paschal is a first-year Giant from Georgia Tech, which sounds funny because Castleberry and Prokop were the big names in Tech's 1942 backfield.

As for the Redskins' line, you can have it at this point. Paschal is going through it, and Leemans and Cuff are going around it, and if those Redskin linemen aren't being outplayed we must be looking at a couple of other teams. Those Giants have a first down on the Redskins' 16 and they didn't drive 55 yards upfield on an overhead trolley.

"Crunch, crunch," that is us, we munching that last paragraph. Cuff just hit the Redskins' line and VICE VERSA. The accent was on the latter, with Cuff fumbling and Clyde Shugart recovering the ball for the Redskins on their own 16 and from the Giants' actions you can see they aren't very philosophic about it.

Here's an unadvertised feature—Sammy Baugh actually running with the ball. Not one of those plays where he was hemmed in on a pass, but a deliberate reverse from Seymour to Baugh that gained 4 yards. Baugh now needs to gain only 876 yards rushing in his last two games to equal the league record for gains from scrimmage.

From Philadelphia they announce the score at the end of the first quarter: Green Bay Packers, 14; Pitt-Phils, 14. Now there are a couple of teams that must be using the lively ball.

The Redskins are now doing all right, despite Blozis who could save everybody a lot of bumps by lining up in the Redskins' backfield; he's been barging in on almost every play. Wilbur Moore took a pass from Baugh for a first down on the Giants' 27. Mrs. Moore's stubborn son caught the ball with Shaefer hanging on his neck.

Blozis is in again. He has Baugh around the legs. Sammy can't get rid of Blozis, but he's getting rid of that ball nicely, nevertheless, and Masterson gets it for a first down on the Giants' 16.

The Redskins are going to settle for a field goal. Masterson is kicking from the 21. No, from the 26, because the Redskins took too much time. Baugh is holding, and Masterson's placement is a horribly wobbly, half-scuffed kick that looks beautiful to him as it goes between the posts for three points.

Solitude is wonderful up to a certain point. Andy Farkas will bear us out. He was all along the Giants' 5-yard line a minute ago and fumbled a long pass from Baugh that would have been a ridiculously easy touchdown. It was the touchdown that wasn't scored.

Tuffy Leemans is now passing for the Giants and it is kind of woeful, but he's the best the Giants have. When you speak of Leemans and Baugh as passers you do not speak of the comparison, merely of the contrast.

They're selling war bonds now during the between-halves intermission and it's adding up to $278,275 worth with some well-heeled and patriotic gent in Section 31 buying a $100,000 number. The loudspeaker blares that the Army will name one of its ships "The Football Fans' Bomber" and somebody in the press box says "They oughta put Baugh inside it."

Masterson goes down field for a third-quarter pass and falls on his back, but Baugh doesn't care. He lays the ball in Masterson's belly to complete the pass, but it's nullified by a penalty.

Now Andy Farkas is doing all right. Slivinski slid him on a sweep at right end for nine, and he just banged through each tackle for 13 more, and right now he's trying to score from the 1-yard line. He makes it, and the Redskins are going to have a 10-0 lead as soon as Masterson kicks the extra point.

Wilbur Moore is earning whatever the Redskins pay him. He just hauled down Paschal after a 25-yard run to the Redskins' 42 and then he saved a touchdown on the next play by collaring Cuff who cut back through tackle for a 22-yard gain. Moore is doing very well, but those Giants aren't doing badly themselves.

There he goes again! Paschal, we mean. Masterson crashed in and had him nailed for a loss but only temporarily. Paschal insisted on going places and ended up 17 yards down field to the Redskins' 3. One more play and—he's over, and Cuff kicks the point to make it 10-7.

For a club that is leading and is supposed to win, the Redskins don't look very hot. The Giants are on the march again and Paschal tears off a 40-yard chunk that looks like a touchdown until Baugh rides him down on the Redskins 21.

Ward Cuff is now trying to tie the score with a field goal from the 22. Willie Wilkin partly blocked it with one hand, and when the play ends, Cuff is one surprised guy. He never anticipated starting out trying to kick a field goal and ending up making a touchdown-saving tackle on the same play, which is what he did because Sammy Baugh grabbed the ball and was in the loose when Cuff hauled him down.

Farkas is jumping around in the Redskins' backfield, trying to find a spot to light as the teams line up. Everything is straightened out finally when Baugh takes him by the arm, whispers the signal all over again, and points to a nice spot where Andy can stay, at least for the time being.

Bob Seymour takes the ball into the Giants' line and is thrown for a 15-yard loss on the play by Farkas who, the referee says, was holding.

Paschal, the rambling wreck from Georgia Tech, just did a pretty job of derailing the Redskins with four minutes to play. He ankled 58 yards through the middle of the Redskins' line, outran Sammy Baugh in the last 25 yards and scored for the Giants. And are the Redskins sorry they over-shifted on the play. All they lost was the ball game.

Paschal Star, Baugh Sets Pass Mark

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

New York, Dec. 5.—The Redskins bumped into their old Polo Grounds jinx and the brilliant running rookie Bill Paschal today and the combination proved too much for the fading Indians, who lost to the New York Giants, 14-10, and watched their Eastern championship hopes reach the panicky stage.

The 51,308 fans were ready to give up on the Giants midway in the third period with the Redskins holding a 10-0 lead and needing only a tie to clinch a championship playoff berth. But that was before the Giants roared back on the ground for 72 yards and a touchdown in five plays and then turned Paschal loose on a 53-yard touchdown spurt in the fourth quarter.

Thus in next Sunday's game in Griffith Stadium the Giants can tie for the Eastern division championship and force a playoff for the right to meet the Chicago Bears. The Phil-Pitt Eagles were eliminated from contention by the Green Bay Packers, 38-28, in Philadelphia.

Baugh Passes Luckman

Sammy Baugh passed Sid Luckman and took over as the forward passer of the year in the statistics. Sammy inspired Redskin drives which culminated in a Bob Masterson field goal in the first period and an Andy Farkas 1-yard buck for a touchdown in the third, but Sam couldn't connect in the dying minutes of the fourth period when he r'ared back and let go on four consecutive long passes which fell long, short or were broken up.

The Giants beat the Redskins and took and 8-to-4 lead in the New York-Washington series by shaking Paschal and Ward Cuff loose for tremendous yardage through the midsection of the Redskin line.

Steve Owen's men rolled up 270 yards rushing to 69 for the dead-tired Redskins in a series of down-field marches.

The Giants took the accent off the forward pass, for a day at least, by spurning aerials after Tuffy Leemans ran into several setbacks attempting to pass in the first half and Emery Nix was stopped cold in the second. The Giant passing "attack" amounted to 7 yards.

Baugh, who played all but the first minute of the game, completed 16 out of 27 for 154 yards, but the Giants stopped him at the payoff.

First Field Goal for 'Skins

The Redskins took a 3-0 lead into the half time intermission when Masterson kicked the first Redskin field goal of the season just 30 seconds before the end of the first quarter. Masterson's wobbly boot from 26 yards out was never in doubt. The 'Skins settled for a field goal after a penalty set them back from the Giants' 16-yard line.

The Giants were behind 10-0 before they laid hands on the ball in the third quarter. The 'Skins took over on their own 36 on the kickoff anad with the help of a pair of first down passes from Baugh to Ends Masterson and Joe Aguirre, Farkas did the rest.

Andy was driving hard, carrying tacklers with him and cutting nicely as he made repeated gains through the Giants, who were never sure whether Farkas was going to run with the ball or Baugh was going to spot a receiver. Farkas made first down on the five and made the toughest five yards in football in three smashes through the line. Masterson converted and it was 10-0,

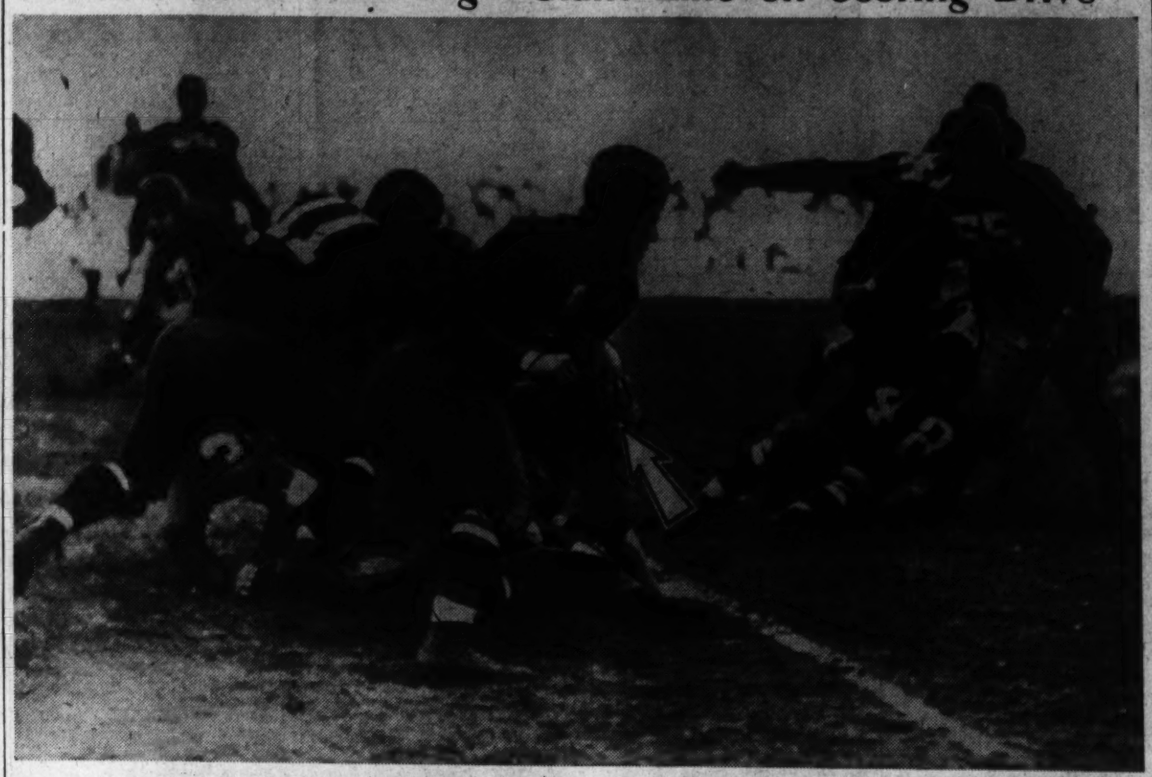
Lichtman Bears Lick Sheboygan

Sheboygan, Wis., Dec. 5.—The Lichtman Bears, world's pro cage champions, invaded the Sheboygan Redskins' home court today and trounced their hosts, 39-30, after a ragged display of basketball that lost the Oshkosh game last night. The Bears threw off their slump and were masters of every situation from start to closing gun.

The accurate marksmanship of Cooper and Bell put the Washington Club in the lead and kept the Western quint battling against a margin they never overcame. The Bears play Fort Wayne there Monday.

Farkas Roars Through Giant Line on Scoring Drive



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"Anvil Andy" Farkas' great running and line smashing gave the Redskins their only touchdown yesterday in New York as the Giants stayed in the Eastern Division championship running by walloping the Washingtonians, 14-10. Despite Farkas' efforts, which gave the Redskins a 10-0 lead on top of Bob Masterson's 26-yard field goal in the first period, the Giants rallied to score twice in the third and fourth periods to triumph. A victory next Sunday for the Giants would earn them a tie with the 'Skins and necessitate a playoff for the right to meet the Chicago Bears for the league title. Camp Lee Tops Airmen for Va. Title, 6-0

Camp Lee, Va., Dec. 5 (AP).—The Camp Lee Travelers captured the mythical Virginia service team championship before over 6000 fans on sun-baked Lee Field today, downing the Richmond Army Air Base Thunderbyrds, 6 to 0.

Today's win for the soldiers of Camp Lee avenged a previous defeat by a similar score at the hands of the Fliers, and left the Travelers out front with a season's total of three wins and one loss. The air base team boasts a record of four wins but have a discounting credit of two losses against service opposition in the State.

The Lee team struck early for the lone score after marching 75 yards. After getting possession of the ball for the first time in the game, Generoso Laluna went into the air with aerials to Ed O'Neill and Soddy Groat for consistent gains. These tosses, aided by powerful line plunges by Elmer McPherson, cracked the Airmen forward wall for the score.

Paced by Lieut. Lee Hutto, the outstanding individual performer of the day, Richmond Air Base made a bid for pay territory in the second quarter and marched to the Lee 4-yard line, but couldn't get over.

The win for the Travelers today gave them possession of a trophy donated by a Richmond sporting goods firm. It will be presented by Robert Brenanaman, a member of the donating firm, when the Camp Lee squad is honored at a dinner here Tuesday night.

Byron Nelson 8 Up On McSpaden After Tour of 162 Holes

Sacramento, Calif., Dec. 5 (AP).—Byron Nelson of Toledo, finished a Nationwide golf match with Harold McSpaden of Philadelphia, here today eight strokes up on his Quaker City opponent on a medal play basis for 162 holes. Nelson's victory was worth $5000 in war bonds.

For the tour, Nelson was 17 under par and McSpaden nine under. In the last round today Nelson's 76 was the first in which he had been over 70 for the entire tour.

Moore's Leg Injured, May Be Lost to 'Skins

By a Staff Correspondent

New York, Dec. 5.—The championship hopes of the Washington Redskins hit another snag tonight when Wilbur Moore, who means more to the Redskins than any player except Sammy Baugh, remained in New York suffering leg injuries which will undoubtedly keep him out of football for the remainder of the season.

Moore walked from the field in the third quarter but required aid in reaching the dressing room and he required help in changing from his togs to street dress. His injuries are of a technical nature but are best described as severe bruises to the thigh and hip. If he is able to play it will be under severe handicap and his value as pass catcher, runner, blocker and defense man will be considerably lessened.

Willie Wilkin, who played his tackle position in great style considering his physical condition, remarked he was going to play next week in an iron lung, watching the play in the mirror and snagging ball carriers as they went by.

Bob Masterson, who got up out of a sick bed to play a fine ball game, tried to bring the Redskins luck in the fourth quarter but his efforts backfired.

Masterson found two pennies on the field and Wilkin told him to stick one in each shoe, for luck. The Redskin captain did and on the next play Bill Paschal went 54 yards for the winning touchdown.

Notes—Ray Hare rode back with one shoe off, receiving treatment from trainer Wilbur Bohm for a torn toenail . . . Bear coaches Hunk Anderson and Luke Johnson scout-say who they were scouting. . . . The Redskins were outnumbered in the dressing room by the usual Giant game alumni. . . . Sammy Baugh again had to be rescued by police from autograph seekers who surrounded the Texan 50-deep for a half hour after game time. . . . Ex-Redskin Lieut. (j. g.) Wayne Millner visited the bench but he had to leave before the end of the game to keep a date with the Navy. . . . The Giants won the toss but in a surprise move elected to kick. . . . Al Blozis slipped from tackle to end in order to be eligible for a surprise pass, but he missed.

George Shorb Wins DCAAU Harrier Title

George Shorb led local harriers in the ninth annual four-mile cross country race and claimed the title of the District A. A. U. cross-country champion yesterday on the Rock Creek Golf Course. Shorb set the new course record for local spikemen at 24:58 and led the Washington Track and Field Club cross-country team to a 16-20 triumph over Catholic University.

The Washington Track and Field star actually crossed the line fourth but the top three runners were nonresidents and were ineligible for the title.

Don Heincke of Baltimore copped first place, and chalked up a record for the new track with a speedy 23:22.8 finish.

Ensign Hemmendinger led the field for most of the course but finished second behind Heincke in 24:07.2 and Maj. Dick Bower, Washington Track and Field Club champ, placed third in 24:41.

Considerable interest was shown by two teams from Eastern Athletic Club, which ran against each other for a two-mile jaunt. All of the nine boys were under 18 years of age. This may inspire local interhigh officials to amend the one-mile limit for a high school student and allow a boy to represent his school in the longer distance runs

Lions In Rally To Turn Back Trojans, 14-6

"Jelli" Pinckney's U st. Lions, rallying in the final period, defeated the Harrisburg Trojans, 14-6, yesterday at Griffith Stadium, in an uphill game before 2,000.

The game was fairly even throughout the first half, the Lions suffering from penalties, and several poor punts which gave their opponents the advantage.

Early in the third quarter Sodie White intercepted Atwell's pass on the Lion's 18, and when Sam Stovall attempted to punt, the kick was blocked and grabbed by the Trojans' Bennie Stevenson, who ran 20 yards for the first touchdown. Atwell failed to convert.

The Lions were in possession of the ball at the beginning of the final period, and "Jitterbug" Barnes started off with a 9-yard gallop to the Lions' 44. Bayman Frazier and Harvey Banks went off tackle for 13 yards, Banks lateralling to Sodie White to put the oval on the Trojan 43.

Then they gave the ball to Buck Perry, and he crashed through center for repeated first downs until he crossed the goal line from the 6-yard stripe. To convert, Bayman Frazier scooped up a bad pass from center in time for Dan Brooks to make the extra point from placement.

Green ran back the kick-off which followed to the Trojan 33, where Atwell attempted a pass to Jimmie Dixon. Jay Tillman, fleet Lion end, leaped into the air to intercept, and scampered 30 yards for the second touchdown seven minutes before the final gun. Again Brooks converted.

Packers Kill Eagles' Title Hopes, 38-28

Philadelphia, Dec. 5 (AP).—The incomparable Don Hutson, playing what he said will be his last game of professional football, personally choked off a fourth-period Philadelphia-Pittsburgh rally today by catching two touchdown passes that gave the Green Bay Packers a 38-28 victory before 34,294, an all-time record crowd for professional football in Philadelphia.

The defeat closed the season for both teams, and wiped out the Eagles' chance for a first-place tie in the league's Eastern division. The Phil-Pitt combine twice came from behind to tie in the rip-roaring, four-touchdown first period, but Greasy Neale's charges dropped behind when Hutson booted a 25-yard field goal in the second period, and never could quite catch up.

Has Scored 544 Points

By his performance, Hutson extended his endless chain of all-time league records to include 74 touchdown passes caught and 544 points scored.

Each team scored in the first three minutes of the game, Tony Canadeo for Green Bay on a 31-yard drive through center, following a fumble recovery, and Jack Hinkle for the Eagles on a 38-yard run around end.

Hinkle, incidentally, became the league's leading ground-gainer for the year by rushing for 59 yards and a season total of 571.

Before the period ended, each team had scored again with Lou Brock snapping a 25-yard pass to Canadeo alone in the end zone, and Tony Bova making a spectacular snatch of Zimmerman's 48-yard pass from the hands of Hutson and Joe Laws and stumbling over from the Packer 10.

Hutson's second-period field goal, set up by Tony Falkenstein's 59-yard run, provided a lead which the Packers never lost. It was the only score of the second and third periods, but as the fourth opened Hutson climaxed a 55-yard offensive by snatching a 12-yard pass from Irv Comp and putting the Packers ahead, 31-14.

Steagles Regain Drive

Suddenly the Steagles recovered the drive they had lacked for 30 minutes, and smashed back after the kickoff for a touchdown, with Bova making a spectacular catch of Al Sherman's southpaw pass from the 13, then falling over in the end zone.

The home forces were very much in the running three minutes later when Lou Brock tipped a pass from Roy Zimmerman and Bova grabbed it on the Packer 4, from where Ernie Steele circled end for a touchdown that left the Steagles behind only 3 points, 31-28.

But Hutson smothered the hopes of the big home-town crown when he raced into the end zone, guarded by Steele and Hinkle, and made a near-miraculous catch of Comp's pass from the 23.

Lee Oma Faces Parks at Turner's Tonight

Kane Meets Bennett in Semifinal

By Al Costello

Lee Oma, a good-looking heavyweight from New York who is supposed to be as good a fighter as he is a looker, squares away against Georgie Parks, hard punching local Negro, tonight at Turner's Arena in the feature match of Matchmaker Gabe Menendez's first card since reentering the local fight picture after an 18-month absence.

Oma, who has twice defeated Parks in Baltimore bouts, once by a knockout, is on the way up to bigger and better things among the fisticuffers. Awaiting him after tonight's bout is a possible shot at Jimmy Bivins, in Cleveland, right after the turn of the year. Menendez also has future plans for the New Yorker and hopes to match him with Lee Savold here, should he again defeat Parks and look good in so doing.

One Punch Needed

Parks, who carries TNT in his right glove, only has to land one punch to upset all of Oma's well laid plans. Not a particularly great boxer, the local Negro is ever dangerous and can bring sudden liquidation to any fighter if he connects squarely on the potato. That's the kind of fighter he is, as per example his performance against the talented Vince Pimpinella, who was giving Georgie an artistic lacing last winter. All of a sudden Vince ran into Parks' right hand and that was the end of the line for Vince.

Parks doesn't figure to beat Oma, however, Oma has shown he knows how to take care of himself and steer clear of Park's potent poke in their previous two meetings. He showed he could punch, too, as his kayo triumph revealed when he put Parks away before, something that isn't done by every heavyweight, and not too often.

LEE 2 to 1 Favorite

All of which has made Lee a 2 to 1 favorite over Georgie.

The six-round semiinal may hog a little of the main go's top billing. Here Coast Guardsman Eddie Kane, a Washington product, goes to bat against Charley Bennett, veteran Baltimore Negro. Bennett, in the role of a substitute for Nick Latsios last summer, handed Eddie a surprise licking for his only defeat in 17 starts as a pro. Previously Kane had spanked Charley in Baltimore. This is their rubber match and the winner is expected to be matched with Latsios, the Bolling Field corporal who came out of the Golden Gloves as a champion. Kane is particularly anxious to scramble it out with the Golden Greek.

Three other sixes fill out the 34-round card, bringing together Walter Haefer and Jimmy Bell, Young Sloan vs. Charley Matthews and Bee Bee Washington vs. Gene Brown.

16 Games for Cagers

Series Stars, Films Reach Alaska Bases

Anchorage, Alaska, Dec. 5 (AP).—The first group of major league baseball stars to visit one of the Nation's war fronts arrived here by air today to bring servicemen a bit of second hand World Series atmosphere.

The five-man USO baseball unit is headed by Frankie Frisch, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and the boyhood playing idol of many of the men now in uniform. The players are:

Stan Musial, the National League's batting star and Danny Litwhiler, both of the St. Louis Cards; Hank Borowy, New York Yankee pitcher, and Fred (Dixie) Walker, Brooklyn outfielder.

Their equipment included a film of the World Series, uniforms, bats and balls.

Their two to three months tour is expected to take them to distant Aleutian bases. It's a long way from baseball season in the North but Army officers said the major leaguers might get in a bit of outdoor hitting and fly chasing where hard packed snow or other ground conditions allow.

The principal entertainment, however, is expected to come from indoor appearances. The World Series film will be run off and then the servicemen can fire questions at the baseball stars.

The sports headliners are a fast-quipping, as well as a hard-hitting, crew and one Army officer predicted "the kids will be crazy over them."

Borowy, the silent member of the group, remarked to sports writers when they noted he was the lone representative of his circuit:

"I guess they figured one American Leaguer can hold his own with four National Leaguers."

Grid Star, Pearce Will Speak Here

CPO Bill DeCorrevont and Lieut. Hardy L. Pearce, of the Bainbridge, Md., Training Station will address the weekly luncheon of the Touchdown Club at 12:30 tomorrow.

Giant Rookie Stars, 'Skins Beaten, 14 to 10

Redskins, after six minutes and six seconds of the third period.

The Redskins had little time to gloat. Paschal gave them an awful scare on the kickoff return when he cut for the left sideline and only an ankle tackle by Baugh saved him from going all the way, but the Redskins saved 30 yards when a pushing penalty on the play set the Giants back to their own 28. Paschal came right back with a 31-yard dash which Wilbur Moore stopped by breaking through Paschal's interference for a touchdown-saving tackle on the Redskins' 42-yard line.

Cuff, who with Paschal, gave the Giants a murderous one-two punch, broke away from shoddy tackling for 22 yards to othe Redskin 20 and before the 'Skins could catch their breath Paschal was off again, sailing through the left side of the Redskin line for 18 yards before he was stopped on the 2. The Redskins were touching him as he went by but they couldn't stop him.

Paschal made a yard and then this baby of the Giants, a 21-year-old youngster with only one year of varsity football at Georgia Tech, leaped over for his eleventh touchdown of the season.

Paschal Off Again

Paschal, who accounted for 188 yards in 28 ball-carrying attempts, by far the outstanding individual ground gaining achievement of the season, was off again after Baugh quick-kicked 53 yards.

The Redskin line buckled at center as the league's new bullet Bill found an opening for 31 yards to the Redskins' 20. Cuff smashed for four yards and Paschal three more before he was stopped and questionable Giant strategy called for a field goal attempt by Cuff from the 23. Wee Willie Wilkin, playing on a twisted knee and with a touch of the grippe, rose up to block the kick. Baugh picked up the ball and only a diving tackle from behind by Cuff prevented Baugh from going 90-odd yards for a touchdown as blockers had formed in front and Cuff was the last man in position to stop him.

Baugh tossed in two more first down passes as the Redskins went to the Giants' 44 early in the fourth period but a 15-yard holding penalty forced Baugh to kick. Following an exchange of punts, the Giants turned Paschel loose for the ball game.

Just a Teaser

The Giants took over on their own 45 and Paschal made a yard, just a teaser. Less than five minutes of playing time now and if the Redskins could hold the Giants on this set of downs and get possession of the ball, they were home. But that was only wishful thinking.

Paschel took the ball on a second down, headed dead ahead, hesitated a split second as he picked his spot and then burst through to sprint 53 yards for his twelfth touchdown, pulling away from the startled Redskins with every step. Cuff's placement was good and the Giant bench and the New York rooters went slightly daffy.

Aguirre brought the kickoff back to his own 34 and the Redskin rooters were crying for Baugh passes. They got them, but with the exception of a first down pass to Aguirre to the Redskin 45 Baugh's receivers didn't get them. Four times Sam tossed desperation aerials, to Farkas twice, Aguirre and Masterson, but one was long, one short, one hit the ground and the veteran Hank Soar broke up another. The Giants took over and ran the clock out.

Fumble Helps 'Skins

The first half was a matter of whether the Giants could gain more ground with Cuff and Paschal carrying than Baugh could through the air. The Giants went to the Redskins' 15 in a 40-yard drive early in the first quarter, but Clyde Shugart recovered a Cuff fumble to put the Redskins momentarily at ease.

Slingin' Sam left little doubt that he would pass Luckman and take over as passing king before the end of the day as he whipped four straight passes for first downs, three of them quick, jump shots and the other a 15-yard pass to Moore who grabbed the ball through a web of Giant coverers. Baugh completed a pass to Farkas with Georgetown's Al Blozis wrapped around his legs. Blozis played 60 minutes for the Giants and the Redskins will tell you he was a mighty factor in that Giant line.

Leemans Smeared

Wilkin smothered Leemans for a 15-yard loss attempting to pass which helped discorage the Giant aerial notions. The New Yorkers tried desperately for a long touchdown play near the end of the first half but Bob Seymour and Ray Hare intercepted a long Leemans pass.

Len Younce, who stepped back from his guard position to effectively handle the Giant kicking, and Frank Cope played exceptional ball for the Giants on the line, opening holes on offense and closing up on defense except for Farkas' drive, and occasional gains by Farkas and Seymour.

The Redskins, with most of the linemen playing with arms and legs heavily taped, were led by Masterson and Wilkin, two of the injured men, and Shugart. The defeat was the second straight for the battered 'Skins, who in the last two weeks have discredited the uniforms of the team that beat the Packers and Bears. The Giants will probably be even-money bets to beat the 'Skins next week and create a play-off for the tie a day after Christmas.

Cliff Olson Added To Wrestling Card

Cliff Olson, Minnesota Swede, former pretender to the world title, will face Frank Brunowicz of Chicago in a special 30-minute match on Wednesday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

They will wrestle in support of the double wind-up, in which George Macricostas, Golden Greek, will face Michele Leona, Italian champion, and the Yellow Mask will oppose Tom Mahoney.

Rosenblum, D. C., Named AAU Officer

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Amateur Athletic Union wound up its fifty-fifth annual convention today by electing L. DiBenedetto of New Orleans to his fifth consecutive term as president.

Other officers elected were:

Ga. Tech to Start Drills Thursday For Sugar Bowl

Atlanta, Dec. 5 (AP).—Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets, 35 of whom have been announced as letter-winners for the 1943 gridiron campaign, will start practice Thursday for the New Year's Day game with Tulsa in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans.

Coach W. A. Alexander plans to allow his squad time to recover from the layoff since the Georgia game but tentatively has scheduled scrimmages for every day next week before dismissing them again for a brief Christmas vacation.

Victory Sidelights

Engine Co. 21 Auxiliaries Win Trophy

The Civilian Defense auxiliary fire companie's drill yesterday was won by the team from Engine Company No. 21, representing Battalion 4, captained by David Dreyfus. Second place was won by Engine Company No. 3, representing Battalion 7, captained by A. Silver, and third by Engine Company No. 9, representing battalion 2, captained by Arthur Donaldson.

The contest which was for a trophy to be awarded by the Civitan Club was held at the Fire Department Training School, 635 N. Carolina ave. se. The competition consisted of a display of speed in reaching a given point, erecting ladders and making fire-hose connections.

Battalion Chief Clement Murphy was chief judge assisted by Capt. K. W. Kay. The trophy, a silver statuette representing an auxiliary fireman, suitable engraved will be presented to Capt. Dreyfus' winning team at the first January meeting of the Civilian Club.

Willkie Held Likely to Enter Md. Primary

Baltimore, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Baltimore Sunday Sun quoted today "sources close to Dendel L. Willkie", as saying it is virtually certain that the avowed Republican presidential nomination candidate in 1944 will enter the Maryland primary election.

The newspaper stated that Willkie, when reached at his New York law office, said that the question of his entering the Free State's May primary would soon be settled, but that yet nothing had been done in the matter.

Any attempt to send Maryland's eight Republican delegates to the convention without voting instructions would be precluded by the entry of any candidate for nomination in the GOP primary, the paper added. The casting of a complimentary vote for Theodore R. McKeldin, Mayor of Baltimore, also would be thwarted, the Sunday Sun said.

Ohio's Governor Bricker, another Republican aspirant, the newspaper quoted as saying, "We're just getting organized out here and things like that (deciding to enter the primary) will have to wait until our organization is completed."

D. C. Man Awarded Navy Cross For Extraordinary Heroism

Irving Randolph Saum, machinist's mate, who at the time he joined the Navy gave his address as 3218 Newark st. nw., where he lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irving R. Saum, sr., has received the Navy Cross for extraordinary heroism aboard the USS Borie, submarine nemesis, it was announced last night by the Navy Department.

SAUM

The award was made in the name of the President by the commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet and it was accompanied by a citation from Admiral R. E. Ingersoll.

The Borie was severely damaged when she rammed a submarine and the port engine put out of commission by water which flooded to the waterline. Saum dove about 10 feet below the surface and closed a valve which enabled the pumps to clear the engine room sufficiently for operation.

The citation reads:

"His tenacity and endurance, together with an utter disregard for his own personal safety, contributed greatly to the maintaining of seaworthiness and power of his ship until she was rejoined by other units of her task force, which were then able to remove the crew of the Borie with a minimum loss of life."

Presentation of the medal took place at the Norfolk Naval Operating Base Hospital. Saum had been injured in the action at sea. He doesn't know how, and it wasn't until he was aboard a rescue vessel that someone called attention to his swollen hand. Several bones in it had been broken.

A bandaged arm hung at his side as he stood at attention while the medal was pinned on him by the commanding officer of the hospital, Capt. H. J. Aston (MC) USN.

3 Sisters, Freed by Japs, Thrill at U. S. Sights

By the Associated Press

Three very excited girls were in Washington Saturday—Christmas shopping in American stores for the first time, seeing the Capitol and White House and Lincoln Memorial, taking their first taxi rides, getting acquainted with their country.

They were Margaret, 16; Nancy, 18 and Jane, 19, pretty daughters of Mrs. Miriam Pratt, who, with their mother, have lived the past 13 years in Peking, China, and the past six months in a Japanese internment camp.

They saw their country for the first time in their memories this week from the deck of the exchange liner, Gripsholm, as it docked in New York.

Have Great Plans

In Washington to visit Mrs. Pratt's sister, Mrs. William Mayer of Arlington, all the Pratts have great plans—sightseeing, eating in American restaurants, riding an escalator, getting ready for the biggest Christmas of their lives with newly-found relatives in a new land.

Mrs. Pratt, a dietitian at a Peking medical college before the war, was born in the Orient and lived in China most of her life.

War caught them there, but it wasn't until six months ago that the order "intern all enemy nationals" meant for the Pratts that they must gather up two trunks, a bed apiece and enter internment camp at Weihsien.

"Life there wasn't too bad," Mrs. Pratt recalled "We formed our own community. Each persoon had a jjob in the camp—mine was as dietitian in the kitchen, my daughters helped there and worked as waitresses—and we ruled ourselves with very little outside interference from the Japs.

Not a Grain of Rice

"The food was not bad, and I don't think anyone in the camp complained of getting too little to She last left "the States" 13 years eat. Strangely enough, we weren't offered a grain of rice during our whole internment. Mostly we ate a great deal of meal and some meat and vegetables.

"We got practically no news of how the war was coming—only what we could read between the lines of old Japanese newspapers which were given us. No visitors ever came into the camp, and no one ever got out—until our release order came this September."

Maid, Boy Friend Held in Gas Death Of 3 Children

Police said Mildred Bacon and Raymond Bradshaw, 22, a truck driver, "cooked eggs and bacon about midnight and blew out the stove's four gas jets because they could not turn them off, and then went back to bed." Bradshaw was quoted as saying he had been drinking.

The children's father, Frank P. Sousa, 35, a shipyard welder who was asleep in an adjoining room, was held in $1000 bail on an adultery charge after saying, according to police, he has an undivorced wife and three other children in Boston.

The children who died were Gene, 3 years; Frank, 2 years, and Alice, 4 months. Their mother, Marie, was at work as a Sun shipyard welder at the time of the tragedy.

2 U. S. Engineers Borrow Incas' Building Scheme

Edward J. Whiting and Charles R. Funk arrived to build hospitals, health centers, medical dispensaries and sewage systems for the Inter-American Cooperative Public Health Service.

They looked around and noticed that some buildings which were standing when the Spanish Conquistadores arrived had plaster applied to thin, bamboo-like reeds. They erected their hospitals with help of these reeds.

Seats Available For Opera Opening

Seats in all the price ranges are still available for the first performance of the Washington Grand Opera season Wednesday night in Constitution Hall, William Webster, general manager, announced last night.

The offerings scheduled for the opening are "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." The "Canio" role in the latter will be sung by the Metropolitan Opera tenor Giovanni Martinelli. Marjory Hess, the American soprano, will sing opposite him in the role of "Nedda." Sydney Rayner and Elda Ercole will appear in the leading roles in Rusticana.

Morton Defense to Rest Today

The defense is expected to rest its case today in the second degree murder trial in District Court of John Walter Morton, 39, charged with beating to death Mrs. Grace G. Groome, 57, in Rock Creek Park last August.

Morton is scheduled to continue testifying in his own behalf and Defense Attorney J. Bernard Flaherty, said he expects to produce character witnesses for Morton, a radio mechanic.

Although a dozen witnesses have said Morton was near the scene of the crime or otherwise identified him, Morton contends he did not enter Rock Creek Park on the day of the slaying and never knew Mrs. Groome.

He told the jury of eight women and four men he had been drinking heavily that weekend and was picked up by a schoolteacher type whose name was either "Vera, Viola, or Violet," who wore glasses and in no way resembled Mrs. Groome, a stenographer.

The victim of the slaying was found under a park bench by a geologist taking a Sunday morning walk. Morton was arrested the following morning, and police found a bloody shirt and pants in his room. He testified the blood resulted from a scuffle with a pickpocket.

Who Owns the Railroads?

BIG BANKERS? With white ribbing on their vests? And heavy loops of gold watch chain across their middles?

Guess again!

Think of a small brick house in a whole row of brick houses in a large city in Ohio or Illinois. Think of a large stone mansion on a Pennsylvania hillside, a place for old folks to go to when they're left alone in the world. Think of hospitals in Indiana and Wisconsin, colleges in Virginia and Washington, insurance companies in New York, and Massachusetts and Minnesota.

Think of a cross section of American life. Now you're getting warm. If ever there was a public property—in the sense of widespread ownership—it's our American railroads.

40,496 of its common stockholders own 50 shares or less. These represent approximately 70 per cent of the total number of common stockholders.

These people live in every state of the union and in its territories. They come from nearly every walk of life, and include employees of the road, teachers, lawyers, business men, doctors, stenographers, farmers, men in the Army and Navy—the kind of people who live "just around the corner" from you.

Few men in the world have fortunes large enough to start a big railroad or to buy one. That's why our American railroads were started by the people, and are still owned by them.

In some countries the people have not been enterprising enough to build and maintain their own railroads. And the government has had to do it for them. With us the citizen and not the state has been the force behind our railroads. We have preferred the progress that comes from free competition to the stagnation that accompanies political patronage and bureaucracy.

This system has worked. In the face of the greatest emergency ever to strike this country, the railroads of America have proved more able than ever before to meet the task imposed on them. With consideration for their welfare in the future, they will meet post-war tasks in the same way.

In short, the railroads could be in no better hands than in the hands of the American people. For they, in the long run, must be served.

Conference Art Bared By Document 47375

Was I naive. Period. For all these years I've thought a conference of Government officials took place when two or more of them got together, accidentally or for a purpose. The meeting place, I thought, could be in a corridor, cafeteria, or cubby-hole and I had no idea that it mattered if the table was round. Now I'm not kiddin'.

But I'm no longer in the dark on the intricacies of conference-making and now I know how exacting and precise the preparations must be. You see, I've just come across one of the most valuable documents in existence—probably the only one of its kind—on how to prepare to hold a conference.

This rare document is numbered 47375 and it was issued by the National Housing Agency. I'm convinced, after talking with some of the foremost conference experts in Government, that Document 47375 contains the latest lowdown so that's why I'm going to share my secret with you.

I shudder to think how conferences were held before 47375 was born. But 47375 is so simple you'll immediately wonder why someone didn't think of it long ago. It's divided into nine major "steps" and under each step is one or more "key points" that must be taken before a conference can be staged.

You're in for a jolt and I won't be responsible for your blood pressure if you read this but here they are:

Step 1. ARRANGE TABLE. (That's the first step and now for the fall as here are the vital "key points.") (a) Square if possible (See, I told you so); (b) leader opposite door, and (c) exact number of chairs. (The only place in Washington where standing room isn't permitted.)

Step 2. PLACE BLACKBOARD. (Now we're getting into the real serious stuff, KEY POINTS; (a) behind leader, (b) with adequate window light, (c) securely (a well-placed point) and (d) chalk and erasers in tray. (It didn't mention not to throw erasers like we did in grade school.)

Step 3. CHECK ILLUMINATION. (And that doesn't mean just a mere switching on the light.) Just listen to these key points (a) nonglaring (b) bright but not too bright, and (c) Venetian blinds if possible. (I think the whole thing is bright but not too bright.)

Step 4. ARRANGE ADEQUATE VENTILATION. KEY POINTS: (a) air-conditioned if possible, and (b) large fan if necessary. Place fan near window. (That conference hot air is awful.)

Step 5. ARRANGE FOR WATER AND GLASSES. Key point: (a) place on table within easy reach of participants. (How's your blood pressure?)

Step 6. DISTRIBUTE ASH TRAYS, PADS AND PENCILS. (Now we can all doodle.) Key point: (a) At each place. (No discrimination here.)

Step 7. PLACE BULLETIN BOARD. Key points: (a) conspicuous spot (b) at eye level, and (c) extra thumb tacks in board. (This document could use a little tact.)

Step 8. ARRANGE CHECKING FACILITIES. Key points: (a) within or adjacent to conference room, (b) away from conference table (why don't they make up their minds) and (c) in customers, adequate number (a conference expert like me can't understand key point c).

I have also learned that the selection of a conference room is most important and that a "quiet location" is recommended and it's suggested that a "quiet location" can be found in—you'd never guess it—well, I'll tell you, in a conference room. I'd try to explain that in a different way, but I'd be sure and get confused.

To think of all the times I've been told that "He's in a conference." Now I'm able to appreciate the phrase.

Church Council Hits at Racial Discrimination

The Federal Council of Churches, repdesentative body of 25 million Protestants, yesterday called upon Christian people to be "unprejudiced and wise enough to bridge and cross the chasms of racial isolation and segregation."

In its annual Race Relations message, the council also urged church people to "vigorously oppose" all policies and practices of racial discrimination in the armed forces and in employment in industry."

Among the most pointed official statements on race discrimination ever issued by the council, the message declared that "the gnawing resentment by dark-skinned peoples against white domination and their feeling that they are deprived of the position properly belonging to free men in a democratic society makes it mandatory for Christians to speak with prophetic voice and apostolic conviction."

Pearl Harbor Services Set Tomorrow

Military and civic organizations will observe the second aniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor tomorrow night with memorial services and tributes to members serving in the armed forces.

The memorial service will be held by Equality Walter Reed Post and auxiliary in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, 13th and Upshur sts. nw. at 8:30 p. m. Members of the Junior Board of Commerce in the armed forces will be honored at a meeting in the Annapolis Hotel at 8 p. m.

George G. McLeish, past post and department commander, yesterday said ceremonies will be opened by a parade of the colors of allied veterans organizations and the chief feature will be a series of tableaux showing the struggle of the American people through the years to preserve their freedom, and provide for its extention to oppressed people everywhere.

The program of the Junior Board, "Pearl Harbor Night," will review the part members of the organization have played in the war effort during the past year.

Invocation by Capt. Constantine E. Zielinski, chaplain, Army Air Forcees, will ope nthe ceremonies. The speaker of the evening, Comdr. C. C. Myers, Naval Medical Corps., will relate his experiences aboard the Solace while under attack.

Greek Church Pearl Harbor Memorial Set

The anniversary of the Jap attack on Pearl Harbor has been decreed as an official memorial day in the Greek Orthodox Church in the Americas, Archbishop Athenagoras, spiritual head of the church in the two hemispheres, announced yesterday.

The gray-beared archbishop celebrated a solemn high mass at the Greek Orthodox Church of Sts. Constantine and Helen, 6th and C sts. nw., in the presence of foreign diplomats, American Government officials and other dignitaries. The mass, commemorating the second anniversary of the Pearl Harbor "stab in the back," memorialized the Americans who died defending that post.

Greeks Honor "Death Day"

Later in the day, at an informal dinner at the Hamilton Hotel, the archibshop explained that the designation of a Pearl Harbor memorial day was in keeping with the tradition of the Greek Church, which honors the "death day" of Greek heroes, instead of the birthday, as in some faiths.

In his decree, copies of which have been sent to all communicants of the Greek Church, the archbishop said, in part:

"We have an additional reason to thank God today and believe in the fulfillment of His promises, which arose on Pearl Harbor Day. Only a short while ago the outstanding diplomat, the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, returned in triumph from Moscow, and when this letter of ours will be read we are sure, a new and complete triumph of our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, will be announced to the world.

First Christmas Parallel

In his sermon, the archbishop drew a parallel between the angels singing a message of peace on earth and goodwill toward men almost 2000 years ago over the Christ Child's manger, and Roosevelt's return on the "wings of the air" with a message of hope for world peace.

Father Thomas Daniels, pastor, assisted in the mass. The guests included the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos; representatives of the Turkish, Chinese, Czecholsolvakian, Yugoslavian and other embassies and legations; Judge and Mrs. Thurman Arnold of the U. S. Court of Appeals, and others.

Church Sends 100th Member To the Colors

Paul B. Cromelin, jr., 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul B. Cromelin, sr., of 3806 Gramercy st. nw., is the 100th member of the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church to enter the armed forces, it was announced yesterday by the Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor.

Mr. Latch mentioned that fact at the congregation's "Christmas Communion" service in the church at New Mexico and Nebraska aves. nw., near American University.

Young Cromelin, whose father is a lawyer and past president of the Washington Methodist Union, was graduated from St. Albans School last June. He was captain of the football team, and received the Hyde medal for outstanding achievement. He enlisted in the Army Air Corps a short time ago, and now is stationed at Greensboro, N. C. Of the 100 members of the Metropolitan Church in the armed forces, a number are women.

Assisting Mr. Latch in the Communion service were Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives and former pastor of Metropolitan Church; Dr. Aubrey B. Potorf, dean of the American University School of Religion, and Lester Smalley, a layman.

Disciples Hold Centennial Services Here

DISCIPLES' CENTENNIAL CELEBRATED HERE—The 100th anniversary of the founding of the first Disciples of Christ Congregation in Washington was marked yesterday by 20,000 Disciples in this area. The picture shows procession that opened services at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, local "mother" church and also the national Disciples' church. The brass trio leading are from the Army Air Forces Band, Bolling Field. They are Sergt. William Ford, Sergt. Norman Irvine and Corpl. Ivan Genuchi

More than 20,000 Disciples of Christ communicants in the Capitol area yesterday commemorated the centennial of the founding of the first Disciples' congregation here.

The occasion was marked by impressive services in 20 Disciples' churches in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia and also by a city-wide program last night at Ninth Street Christian Church, 9th and D sts. ne.

The tall-pillared, familiar landmark of National City Christian Church at Thomas Circle, local "mother" church and also national church of the Disciples, yesterday morning was filled with 1400 centennial worshipers, including high church officials from many parts of the Nation.

From their pews in the historic edifice, communicants heard Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor, assure that the congregation would "build on" in its next century in the light of the spiritual heritage of the church's forbears.

Dr. Hastings warned, however, that the church must not compromise with the world, saying that "it is either annihilation or Christianity."

"We either live together as brothers or we don't live—we're through!" he exclaimed, clenching his fists while his voice boomed out from the high pulpit.

Among the Disciples' leaders participating in the communion service that preceded the sermon were Oreon E. Scott, president of the national board of trustees that controls the National City Church; Dr. Alonzo Willard Fortune, minister of the Central Christian Church, Lexington, Ky.; Dr. Fred Smith, executive secretary of the Disciples' pension fund; Dr. Eric Carlson, executive secretary of the Disciples' benevolent department; Dr. William Pearcy, treasurer of the Disciples' church extension board; the Rev Benton Roy Hanan, associate pastor of National City Church, and others.

A heart attack prevented the appearance at the service of Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, former National City pastor, now editor of The Christian Evangelist, St. Louis, Mo.

The program at National City Church began with an impressive choral processional, led by a brass trio from the Army Air Forces' Band at Bolling Field. They were Serg. Norman Irvine and William Ford and Corp. Ivan Genuchi.

Dr. Carroll C. Roberts, president of the Christian Church Council of Washington, conducted the city-wide Disciples' centennial service last evening at Ninth Street Church, where he is pastor. Others on the program were the Rev. Ralph Frame, First Christian Church, Alexandria; Dr. Hastings, the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers sr., Fifteenth Street Christian Church, and the Rev. J. Virgil Lilly, Rockville Christian Church. Combined choirs of local Disciples' churches sang under the direction of William Braithwaite, of National City Church, and Joseph Harrison, of Ninth Street Church.

Human Plans For World-Cure Called Futile

The Rev. John Carter Smyth, C. S. P., of Catholic University, said yesterday that "mere human plans are not enough to set the world aright."

Father Smyth, professor oof Sacred Eloquence, spoke over the Catholic Hour on NBC under the auspices of the National Council of Catholic Men.

"After the last war," said Father Smyth, "we put our trust in human ingenuity and skill to safeguard humanity against the future, and what a tragic mistake that proved to be, for without realizing it we were sowing the seeds of another and more deadly war.

"And if there is to be any hope that a new order can emerge from the present chaos, and a better way of life assured mankind in the future, we shall have to go deeper than skilled discussion and devisement of political, social and economic changes, however radical these may be."

"The Church never before had such an opportunity to demonstrate its true function in the remaking of the world as now," Dr. John O. Knott said yesterday at Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 34th and Lowell sts. nw.

Dr. Knott, a retired Congregationalist minister, declared, in part:

"The church is the heart of the Nation where it functions as it should. Though it does not dictate nor seek to rule in civil affairs, it sends the blood of its inspiration into every department of civil life. It claims that if men are right at heart, they will do right.

Man Ends Life By Hanging at Oakland, Md.

Certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County, Md., medical examiner, in the death of Fred Marshall Marks, 50, who was found hanging yesterday morning at 6247 Marlboro Pike, Oakland, Md., where he had been visiting for several months.

A native of Virginia, he had been employed as a tobacco salesman and in 1911 served in the U. S. Army. Police found a note and learned he had been despondent for some time, Dr. Boyd said. Marks is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rose Lee Marks of Cheverly, Md., and several grown children.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N st. nw. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Traffic Crash Injures Owner Of Art School

August King-Smith, 61, of 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw., was released last night from Emergency Hospital after he was treated for cuts and bruises suffered in a collision between his station wagon and a bus earlier at 20th and Q sts. nw.

The driver of the bus was Arthur A. Sugars, jr., 31, of 40 Rhode Island ave. ne. He and some 40 passengers were not hurt.

King-Smith, owner of the King-Smith School of Art, was unconscious when he arrived at the hospital, police said.

Three-year-old Arnold C. Bennett, of 1258 Meigs pl. ne., received minor cuts and bruises late yesterday when he was knocked down by an automobile in front of his home.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital by George W. White, 26, of Takoma Park, Md., driver of the car which struck him, and was released after receiving first aid. Police said the boy ran into the street from behind parked automobiles.

Lieut. Comdr. Speer Is Reported Dead

Lieut. Comdr. John Orin Speer, whose wife, Mrs. Edith Bower Speer, lives at Annapolis, Md., was listed as dead yesterday by the Navy Department.

'Slandered' Policeman Is Arrested

Policeman Robert J. Maghan, jr., 42, who filed a $150,000 slander suit November 16 against District Commissioner John Russell Young, Police Chief Edward J. Kelly and Police Inspector Robert J. Barrett, was arrested early yesterday on a drunkenness charge. He was off duty at the time of the arrest.

The suit against the officials grew out of Maghan's recent demotion from a detective sergeant to a private in the Traffic Division.

Maghan was suspended yesterday by Lieut. Earl Hartman of the Seventh Precinct after being arrested about 8 a. m. at 34th and M sts. nw. He posted a $10 cash bond and was released about two hours after his arrest, pending a preliminary hearing in Municipal Court Thursday.

Pending Full Report

The suspension was made pending the filing of a complete report of the arrest with public officials. Maj. Edward J. Kelly, police commissioner, said he could not predict what further action would be taken against Maghan until a full report of the arrest has been made and the drunkenness charge has been disposed of in court.

James L. Laughlin, Maghan's attorney, who filed the slander suit, said, "We'll state our position as to this arrest in papers that we'll file in District Court Monday morning."

Maghan's interpretation of the significance of the arrest would be made an amendment to the slander suit, the attorney asserted.

Seventh Precinct officers said Maghan was arrested by Sergt. James Pipkin upon the complaint of D. C. Edens, a District-employed bridge guard. Neither Pipkin nor Edens could be reached for a statement last night.

Attorney's Version

Laughlin said he understood that Maghan had come out of a restaurant and gotten into his car when the bridge guard came up to him and started a conversation.

"I was told that the bridge guard tried to take him out of the car, and that the Seventh Precinct officers were called," Laughlin said. A quart whisky bottle, almost full, was taken from Maghan's car by the officers, Laughlin said.

"But he says the whisky bottle had been in his car over a week and that he was not drunk or drinking," the attorney added.

Wanted Man Skates Into Arms of Law

A Marine private who had been frolicking around since September 15 when he stole a truck and escaped from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where he was under confinement for a minor offense, put on his skates Saturday night and shortly thereafter was arrested by FBI agents in a local ice-skating rink.

He was booked as Thomas William Moroney, 20, Boston, Mass., and will be arraigned this morning before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on the truck-theft charge, a Federal offense. Meanwhile, the police are trying to connect him with a series of thefts here ranging from $23 to $337 and the issuing of two bad checks.

In making his escape from the Navy Yard Moroney is charged with bowling over a guard and knocking the gun from his hand. FBI agents immediately began looking for him and in the course of the investigation learned he was a skating addict; rollers or ice made no difference to Thomas.

When they closed in on him at the local ice rink they waited until he had on his skates. If he's going to do any running at all they will be no help, the agents reasoned. He cut a few fancy figures and appeared to be having a good time, they reported last night.

At the time of his arrest Moroney was wearing the uniform of a sergeant, to which he had no right; a campaign ribbon, a pre-Pearl Harbor ribbon and wings none of which, the agents said, he had earned.

Boy, 5, Killed By B&O Train At Brentwood

A gay family reunion was changed into an occasion of mourning yesterday when little Charles Ring, jr., of 101 4th st., Takoma Park, Md., who would have been 5 years old next Sunday, was killed by a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad train at Brentwood, Md.

The child was playing on the tracks while "tagging along" with several older boys of the family who were playing war in nearby bushes. His 5-year-old cousin, "Bobby" Torillo, saw the accident and ran screaming to the home of the child's grandmother, Mrs. Blanche Torillo, 3710 Perry st., Brentwood, where the party was being held. The boy apparently had been watching one train go by and had not noticed the Washington-bound train which struck him, officials said.

The grandmother ran to the tracks and saw the pitiful remains of the little fellow, who was known as "Buttons" because he had been such a tiny mite when he was born prematurely but since had grown to be quite husky. She fled the scene and called police. The little crushed body was removed to Gasch's funeral home in Hyattsville, Md.

The engineer of the train, F. L. Maddox of Halethrope, Md., told county police that he saw the boy, but too late to stop the train. The boy was carried four blocks before the train could be stopped.

Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner, last night issued a certificate of accidental death. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at Gasch's funeral home and burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Besides his parents, the boy is survived by a 3-year-old brother, John Robert.

D. C. to Ask Gallinger Fund Again

Turned down by the Senate Appropriations Committee, the District Commissioners will confer within the next few days in an effort to find other means of clearing up the Gallinger Hospital situation, it was learned last night.

The Appropriations Committee refused to allocate $15,750 the Commissioner sought to reorganize the administrative set-up at Gallinger and to provide superintendents there 24 hours a day. The request for this money was the Commissioners' answer to a report made by the District subcommittee headed by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, who charged maladministration at the hospital and recommended that five persons, including Commissioner Guy Mason, be dismissed.

To Repeat Request

At the same time, it was learned that the local government will repeat the request for the money when the regular District of Columbia appropriation is presented to Congress in the spring.

Officials at Gallinger Hospital, blamed for part of the results of the Senate probe, said they were bewildered by the committee's action, which negated what they believed would bring the hospital up to date administratively.

Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada said the committee refuse to appropriate the money because it was felt the proposal to employ additional supervisors was futile and would be of no real assistance to hospital patients.

As to the failure of the committee to grant $15,000 for construction of a new Patterson School, Senator McCarran stated it was deemed unwise to buy real estate here at the present time unless found to be absolutely necessary.

May Try Lanham Act

The national defense deficiency bill returned on Saturday by the committee included $137,769 for other items here. Included are $125,000 to repay erroneous tax collections resulting from the new law exempting properties of religious, charitable and educational institutions; $4808 for a claim against the city government; $2000 for refunding water rents and other tariffs, and $5961 for retirement pay to former Judge Robert E. Mattingly of Municipal Court.

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson

Mr. O'Malley! Jane's mother isn't going with us to see Santa Claus tomorrow. She has a cold . . . But my mother will take Jane and me.
Too bad about Mrs. Shultz, m'boy. . . . We need all our operatives to insure the success of my plan to board this Claus in his den . . . But we'll manage, won't we, Gus?
Me? Go into a department store? During the Christmas rush? Even the January white sale leaves me haggard! . . . No, O'Malley, NO!
Very well. We'll carry on without you, too, Gus . . .
I hope your mother won't lose heart when she learns of this further depletion of our party.
Barnaby, does your mother know HE's coming with us? . . .

Casual Use, Prescription Of Sulfas May Be Dangerous

By Logan Clendenning, M.D.

"I have lived through a good many medical fads," said my old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs. "And I have come to the conclusion that a scientific physician is a real rarity. Most of them practice by ear. They hear about something at a lunch table and begin to use it.

Dr. Gibbs first fad was the strychnine fad. "When I started to practice medicine strychnine was the drug every doctor had to give every patient, "he explained." What has become of that? I haven't heard of a dose of strychnine being given for 20 years.

"Then there was allergy, then the endocrines, then vitamins, and now it is the sulfa drugs.

Importance of Examination

"Not that these things are not all right in their place. We need vitamins and most of us get enough in our food. But to dish out a handful of vitamin tablets to any body whether they have arthritis or pyorrhea or bad eyesight without making any kind of examination or considering what would be wise for the patient is neither science or sense.

"The same thing is happening with the sulfa drugs. They are valuable, even magical, in their action on certain diseases. But the number of those diseases is limited. And to use them any which way for any old thing is not only unfair to the patient, but may be downright dangerous.

"One of the latest ways I notice they are using them is as a nasal spray. One report says this method is good in certain forms of chronic sinus disease. And another that the sprays are good for the common cold. Other reports say they are no good for any of these things. All the reports are from equally eminent men.

"What can you believe? Perhaps they are good for certain forms of chronic sinus disease. The chances that they would be any good for the comon cold are very faint, because the cold is due to a virus.

Various Dangers Cited

Also, they may be dangerous, Dr. Gibbs continued. "I see a report of a woman who self-dosed herself over a period of weeks with sulfathiazole ointment, applying it to a fisures at the corner of her nose. She died and it was found she had sulfathiazole crystals all through her kidneys.

"Then I see that use of sulfathiazole tablets is helpful in pyorrhea. Also in Vincen's infection of the tonsils and so-called trench mouth, which is really Vincent's infection, a form of pyorrhea. There may be more sense in that and one is glad to see careful experiments carried on, but I would not rush into such practice until it is better established.

"They are being used also in dermatology—in impetigo and other pus infections, and I have my friend, Dr. Harold Cole's, in Cleveland, word for their efficiency in such conditions and his word is good enough for me."

The Women Are to Blame

Not only are women spending the greatest amounts on record —and in the face of ever diminishing supplies of goods— but they are also spending a larger proportion of their incomes than they spent last year, all of which makes an ideal breeding place for INFLATION.

To be sure, prices have gone up—some. But the increases in expenditures are way ahead of the advances in retail prices. General retail prices were 6.5 per cent higher this July than last; 5.8 per cent higher this August than in August, 1942, according to the Department of Commerce. All clothing costs had increased just over 3 per cent in the year between July, 1942 and July, 1943, reports Bureau of Labor Statistics, while women's clothing costs rose 4.2 per cent.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The acceptance of the idea that it is wholesome and natural for a child to get honest answers to his questions about sex does not imply that a parent shall go overboard when a question is asked and try to give the child complete information of this complex subject.

Neither does it mean that because we are honest with children about sex that we need give them medical information about some of the possible accompaniments of childbirth.

We have to hold fast to common sense. We have to keep in mind what we are trying to accomplish, namely, to give children an idea that sex is part of life and as human beings they are entitled to know what it is all about.

Mrs. K. S. S. thinks it is wrong for mothers to insist upon discussing the aches and pains incident to childbirth. "My friends do this right in front of my 5-year-old daughter and though I tell them to be careful what they say, they nod and smile and go right on talking. They spare no details. I can't see any point in it."

The probability is that your daughter is too young to comprehend what your friends are discussing. She may not even connect it with babies. But if she does, she is acquiring an attitude toward pregnancy and childbirth which may stay with her for the rest of her life.

The painful fears of young mothers faced with this new experience may well date from early childhood and half-remembered stories of fear and pain.

We should express to children only our joyful attitudes toward the coming event, giving them the feeling that it is a privilege to welcome a new life.

Emphasis upon the accidents or discomforts of the condition throws the subject out of balance. The child isn't old enough to sense those emotions which make discomforts bearable, but she does know pain and it may become the "idea" most firmly connected with pregnancy.

You can refuse to be a party to such discussions or to send the girl away with her whetted curiosity unsatisfied. Don't say, "I'd rather you didn't say"; "Please don't." Then they have no choice but to stop talking.

For our leaflet, "Answering the Child's Questions About Babies," send a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post.

For Speeding's Sake

One reason for the increased dollar spending on clothing is that women are buying more expensive clothes than formerly. This is shown by the fact that main store sales of women's apparel and accessories increased 31 per cent, while basement store sales rose only 13 per cent between July, 1942, and July, 1943. While this may be due in part to the fact that low-priced apparel is scarcer than high-priced, yet the increased expenditures for real luxury items indicate that much of the spending is for spending sake—not for the sake of necessity.

Removing Sway From Back Will Often Cure Hefty Hips

By Ida Jean Kain

Many a girl worries about hefty hips when what's wrong is a sway back. A sharp incurve at the small of the back just naturally makes the hips jut out. The cause is the incurve, not avoirdupois. And the cure is exercise, not caloric clipping.

To add to the confusion, much of the exercise must be concentrated on the muscles of the stomach. What's that got to do with it? Well, weak, sagging stomach muscles cause an outcurve in front which may be pulling the small of the back in. It is what you call a compensatory curve, and it isn't the kind you want.

If you have to straighten out a sway back to reduce your hips, here are the exercises that will do it—and tone the stomach muscles.

Position: Lying on back on floor with knees flexed, hands grasping kneecaps.

Movement: Work the hip muscles, pull with hands, and yank alternate knees close to chest. Keep it up for 10 counts, later 25. Then rest for a minute with arms clasping flexed knees to chest.

Position: Sit with back against wall, legs straight out on floor in front, knees together. Press entire back flat against wall from small of back to back of head.

Movement: Pull up and in with lower abdominal muscles as you bend over and see how far past your toes you can slide outstretched hands. Keep your back straight and bend from the hips. Come back to position and repeat five times, later 10. Rest up for the next exercise by sitting still in the starting position—back flattened against wall, abdominal muscles pulled up and in.

Position: Lie on back on floor with hips against wall, legs straight up the wall, for the "wall bicycle."

Movement: First pull up and in with lower abdominal muscles and flatten the small of your back against the floor. Keep as flat as possible throughout the exercise.

Movement: Flex alternate knees vigorously toward the chest —one leg should be thrust straight up wall as other is flexed. Put energy into it, and this is almost the same action you get in riding a bike. Pedal for 30 counts, pausing between each 10 to relax stomach muscles for a second. Gradually, work up to 50 counts. At the end of the exercise, relax for a minute with knees flexed over chest.

A Few Drops Used In Time Help Prevent Many Colds From Developing!

Specialized Medication
Perfected by Makers of Vicks VapoRub
Can Be Used Anytime—Works Fine!

WITH more and more doctors being called to war—and the doctors remaining at home busier than ever—it's tip to you to take extra-good care of yourself.

Do all you can to avoid sickness that might lay you up. And above all—watch out for colds—contagious colds that cause the loss of millions of working-hours every month.

One of the best—and easiest—precautions you can take is to act quick at the first sniffle, sneeze or sign of stuffiness—by putting a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril.

WORKS WHERE TROUBLE STARTS

Specialized medication—Va-tro-nol works where 3 out of 4 colds start. Its quick action aids natural defenses against colds—and so helps prevent many colds from developing if used in time. Always keep Va-tro-nol handy at home and at work—ready to use at the first sniffle or sneeze. You'll like the way it works!

When a Head Cold stuffs up your head, a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol quickly relieves the sniffly, sneezy, stuffy distress, makes breathing easier. Try it!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Engaged to One Girl Whom He Loves Devotedly, Soldier Is Dismayed by Another Girl's Ardent Courtship of Him; Asks How to Deal With Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: During the past four years, I have been a soldier in the United States Army. During this time, I have met women of all ages, in many walks of life. There is a lovely girl in my home town to whom I have been engaged for the past two and a half years. Being a modern, broad minded girl, Jane does not object to my association with other women while away from home, because she realizes a soldier's need of companionship. Jane and I firmly believe our love is strong enough to last until such time as circumstances permit us to be married.

Recently, while stationed at a Western camp, I met a girl who was just another friend in a long list of acquaintances, so far as I was concerned. On no occasion did I lead her to believe it was anything but friendship with me. However, when it came time for me to transfer to my next post, she seemed quite downcast at the prospect. And now that I have been transferred, she has telephoned long-distance several times, and has also written me long letters, in which she ardently declares her love for me, and says she cannot live without me.

Despite my considerable travels about this country and abroad, this is the first time I have ever been "chased," so to speak. This girl is most persistent in her claims upon me, even though she knows I am engaged. And caring for her only as a friend, I am quite perplexed to know how to convince her of that fact. Will you kindly give me your advice,—as to how to make her understand that the only girl in my life is my fiancee? D. V. C.

Problem Hinges On Man's Vanity

DEAR D. V. C.: You have a problem here only because you think you have. And the reason you think you have is because your vanity is, for the time being, warping your perspective. While realizing that the shamelessly pursuing, unscrupulously piratical lady could not, and does not, hold a candle to your fiancee in your estimation, nevertheless you are pretty touched by her perfervid appreciation of your manly charms,—and that is why you are holding back from dealing her the figurative kick in the teeth she has coming to her.

A MAN is not yet psychologically fit, nor emotionally organized, to stake trustworthy claim to one fine woman's exclusive devotion, either in engagement or marriage, until he has attained the tough integration of character that enables him to deal cleanly (and bruskly, when necessary) with this breed of human termite,—the like of which normally attractive persons of either sex usually come up against, sooner or later.

Isn't What You Say; It's How You Say It

THE WAY to make this wily little expert in the game of hearts understand that your fiancee IS the only girl in your life is (1) to get that fact firmly fixed in your own mind; knowing that all other facts and possibilities of your existence are secondary to it; and (2) then just bluntly tell her so; with your thoughts fixed, while telling her, on the image of Jane; and with the statement of truth uttered as a proud declaration of how you feel about her. When you bring that approach to clearing the air, you will experience a buoyant lift-of-spirit in doing so; and you will have done more, in that instant, to strengthen the bond of love between Jane and yourself than any gracious face-to-face attentions ever could. And it will be the quality,—the dedicated sincerity,—of your manner of speaking, more than what or how much you say, that will give Miss Jessie James to know, once and for all, that she hasn't a chance of undercutting Jane.

IN DEALING with the situation she has been pleased to create, take a tip from Shakespeare, who said: "This above all: to thine own self be true, and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man." It is your integrity and Jane's warrant for trusting you that are being put to searching test; and in seeing (as you should) that you pass that test with flying colors, you are by no means required to give strained solicitude to the romantic aches and pains of a brash female who is obviously a stranger to self-control. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

New Low: Paper Clothing

In a broadcast from a German-controlled Danish radio station, reported by the Federal Communications Commission, it is learned that Nazi authorities in Norway are promoting paper clothing for the working man this winter. Norwegian textile factories have already begun production on these, according to the broadcast, which added, "Tests have proved that paper clothes last very well and are cheap."

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

In Defense of Parents

Almost anyone can become a lecturer on juvenile delinquency these days. All you have to do is to quote a few statistics, deplore the situation in ringing terms and wind up in a burst of oratory with the immortal phrase, "The parents are to blame!"

Of course you may add variety to your speech by blaming also the schools, the churches, the community, and possibly the administration. But primarily you solve the problem by pointing your finger accusingly at the parents and warning them to do something quickly—presumably get out the hickory switch, or at least deliver some good moral lectures.

Appoint Committees To Improve Parents

For decades, perhaps centuries, this thing has been going on. We have heard this accusation from the pulpit, the lecture platform, the halls of Congress. Women's organizations have been passing resolutions about it and even appointing committees to do something about the parents. The parents themselves have gone so far as to admit they are to blame and have also vaguely resolved to "do something."

Like most threadbare sayings, this one happens to be largely true. But how many of those who glibly assess this colossal responsibility on the parents have any conception of the economic, educational and psychic factors involved in functioning effectively as a parent? How many realize to what extent society—and themselves—are to blame for the parents?

Most exponents of the "parents are to blame" school of thought (or rather of speech) skim blithely over the surface of the problem. . . . Let the mothers stay home—quit work or quit gadding . . . See that youngsters are told what is right and wrong . . . Keep them in Sunday school . . . Do away with divorce and broken homes. . . . Go back to the good old days of parental discipline, etc. etc.

Surface Remedies Of No Avail

Praiseworthy as these suggestions may be, they fail to touch on the fundamental issue, the personal relationship of parent and child. They are based on the assumption that the mere physical act of becoming a parent automatically endows one with the spiritual and mental qualities and the psychological knowledge to direct wisely another human being's life. They take no account of the widespread ignorance, confusion and groping of the millions of parents trying to function in roles for which they have had absolutely no education or training. They ignore the economic necessity that forces many a mother to leave home to work and drains her of the vitality of being an active influence in the lives of her children; they fail to comprehend the flux of social life that so often sweeps a child beyond the static world of his parents; they do not recognize that the isolated, impregnable old-time home has opened its doors and is merging more and more with the community, and that parents are finding their job increasingly a collective undertaking.

It is to be hoped that the Senate subcommittee in its juvenile delinquency probings will not be content with the many trite generalities and bewhiskered moralisms that will be presented to it, but will delve more deeply into the roots of the juvenile crime wave—if indeed such a phenomenon does exist. It is to be hoped that we will have an end of this "parents are to blame" formula unless the proponents of it are prepared to offer some basic, sociological suggestions for helping the parents in their stupendous task.

Getting Ready for the Navy Ball

Miss Florence King, daughter of the Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Ernest J. King and Mrs. King, with two other members of the Junior Naval Officers' Committee, Lieut. Comdr. John J. White and Lieut. Travis Brown, look over the plans for the Winter Ball to be held at the Mayflower Hotel on December 18

Navy's Annual Benefit Ball To Attract Ranking Officers

Invitations have been sent out for the annual "Winter Ball" to be given Saturday, December 18, at the Mayflower, by the Junior Naval Officers Committee. As for similar seasonal affairs given by the committee in the past, proceeds from this ball will be given to the District Chapter of the Navy Relief Society.

The committee will have ranking American Naval officers and their wives as honored guests. These include Secretary and Mrs. Frank Knox, Under Secretary and Mrs. James V. Forrestal, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ferdinand L. Reichmuth, Rear Admiral and Mrs. R. E. Schuirmann, Rear Admiral and Mrs. W. B. Young, Captain and Mrs. John E. Gingrich, Captain and Mrs. T. Earle Hipp, Captain and Mrs. Andrew D. Mayer, Captain and Mrs. Lewis L. Strauss, Captain and Mrs. A. Loring Swasey, and Commander and Mrs. Frank Slingluff.

Naval Attaches Are Invited

Invitations have been extended to the various Naval Attaches and other ranking Naval officers from the United Nations' delegations stationed in Washington. The Junior Naval Officers Committee is composed of junior officers from the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard stationed in the Washington area. Both men and women officers of the three services, however, are cordially invited to attend. Tickets for the ball should be obtained in advance from desginated officers, from the Officer Club at the Burlington Hotel.

The annual "winter ball" has become established as one of the largest Navy functions of the year and has never lacked patronage. It is estimated that about one thousand persons will be accommodated this year.

Lieut. Comdr. White In Charge of Ball

In charge of the arrangements for the "winter ball" is Lieut. Comdr. John J. White, jr. He is being assisted by an Officers committee composed of Lieut. Comdr. Alexander C. Liggett, Lieut. Samuel G. Atkinson, Lieut. Travis T. Brown, Lieut. John Burwell, Capt. Lewis H. Martin, USMC, Lieut. Manson F. McCormick, Lieut. Charles E. Peterson, Lieut. Richard J. Shukle, Lieut. (j. g.) John M. Exton, Lieut. (j. g.) W. K. Haverstick, Lieut. (j. g.) T. S. Kolb, Lieut. (j. g.) John L. Spencer, and Ensign John G. Faron.

Clifton Foss Returns Home After Visit With Brewsters Here

Mr. Clifton Macy Foss of Portland, Me., left Friday evening for his home after several days visit with his brother-in-law and sister, Senator and Mrs. Ralph Brewster at the Mayflower.

Mr. Foss and the Brewsters had spent Thanksgiving at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, later attending the commissioning ceremonies of the U. S. S. Hornet at the Portsmouth Navy Yard. Mr. Foss' son, Lieut. Robert Foss, USN, is now attached to that famous craft.

Although the ship just commissioned is the second aircraft carrier of that name, it is the eighth Hornet in the United States fleet. The first aircraft carrier to bear the name Hornet was the Shangri-La from which Maj. Gen. James Doolittle launched his raid on Tokyo.

The commissioning ceremonies, when the ship was officially handed over to the commandant, were followed by a luncheon on board, attended by 500 guests of Mr. Roger Williams of Newport News, Va., representing the shipbuilders.

During his stay here, Mr. Foss was guest of honor at a number of small dinners given in his honor by the Senator and Mrs. Brewster's many friends in Washington.

Venezuelan Guest Departs for Tour Of United States

Dr. Andres Eloy Blanco, a member of the Venezuelan Congress, has left for New York from where he will start on an extensive tour of this country as a guest of the Department of State.

The Latin-American legsilator was informally entertained while here. Last week he was the honor guest at luncheon when Charles Thomson, chief of the Division of Cultural Relations, entertained at the Mayflower. A buffet supper was given by the Commercial Counselor of the Venezuelan Embassy and Senora de Coll-Pardo. More recently the Ambassador, Senor Don Diogenes Escalante, arranged a luncheon at which members of the embassy staff were guests.

Visitor Feted

Baroness Baeyens, wife of Baron James Baeyens, former First Secretary of the French Embassy, who is now in North Africa, has arrived in Washington for a visit. She was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lucet at cocktails on Thursday afternoon. Mr. Lucet is a former Attache of the French Embassy.

Gold Braid in Abundance At British Reception

By Peggy Preston

"Is every British admiral in Washington here this afternoon?" The guest who asked this question at the Saturday afternoon reception given by Vice Admiral and Mrs. James L. Dorling might well have received a solid round of 'Aye, Ayes' in answer. So much in evidence was the glittering gold braid and navy blue at the 6 to 8 o'clock fete that it seemed a certainty that every British naval officer in town was in attendance.

Vice Admiral Dorling, British admiralty supply representative in Washington and his attractive blue-eyed wife, received the 200 or more guests in the upper drawing rooms of their home on Bancroft Place. The party, Mrs. Dorling explained, had a triple purpose. It celebrated the return to good health of the admiral who while on a recent trip to England contracted pneumonia; it brought together their many scores of friends in local naval circles, and lastly it was a special in-gathering of their American acquaintances.

Present also were a number of guests from diplomatic cricles. Spotted here and there in the throng was the Agent General for India and Lady Bajpai, who chatted long with the retiring Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Close. The Australian Minister and Lady Dixon were among early arrivals, along with the Naval Attache of the Netherlands Embassy Rear Admiral Meijer Renneft, who was accompanied by his pretty blonde daughter, Mrs. Russell Wilson.

From other embassies came the Soviet Naval Attache and Mme. Yogorichev, the Soviet Military Attache and Mme. Saraev, the British Naval Attache and Mrs. Pott, and the Canadian Commercial Counselor and Mrs. Scott.

Sir Richard and Lady Fairey were there, Sir Richard capturing all eyes as he towered above everyone in the room. Also in attendance were Vice Admiral Sir Wilfred and Lady French, Lady Vincent-Jones, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard, Vice Air Marshal and Mrs. McNeece Foster, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alexander H. Van Keuren.

Among the residential Washingtonians present were Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, the Count and Countess de Castellane, Rear Admiral and Mrs. R. E. Schuirmann, and scores of others from naval circles. Still others there were Ann Harcourt, British artist; Lieut. Comdr. John Miller and Capt. and Mrs. Philip Glover.

Spanish Class to Give Luncheon

The Ambassador of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla were guests of honor at the Spanish language group luncheon held on Friday at the home of one of its members, Mrs. Ralph Bard, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy.

At these fetes, Prof. Ramon Ramos, instructor of the group, prepares a typical Spanish meal with the assistance of volunteer members of his class and conversation throughout the luncheon is held in Spanish.

General Ulio Will Attend Bond Benefit

Maj. Gen. James Ulio, the adjutant general of the Army, will be guest of honor at the War Bond and Stamp Dance which the Adjutant General's Office of the War Department will give in the new ballroom of the Shoreham this evening.

Accompanying General Ulio will be Gen. Robert Dunlop, Col. J. Huntington Hills, Col. Jesse Boykin, Col. Floyd Rains and Col. Carroll Elliott. Officers and their wives from Fort Belvoir and Fort Meade will also attend. Johnny Flannagan and his band have contributed the music for the benefit.

Chinese Envoys' Home to Be Scene of United Nation's Fete

United Nations club members will have an interesting evening Wednesday when they attend a reception being held by the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei at 8:30 at the Chinese Embassy, 3225 Woodley rd. Col. N. K. Wong, liaison officer for the committee on the interexchange of Chinese and American films, has arranged for a film program which will include March of Time's "China," "Prelude to War," and "Flight of the Dragon," a story of Chinese art released by the National Film Board of Canada.

Also on the list of entertainment for the evening is singing by Nelson Ho. He will be accompanied by Miss Ann Hayes and his songs will include "Song of the Great War" and "Chee-Lai," the famous march of Chinese volunteers.

Miss Nanieta Antilotti Is Bride of Calvin Wallace Smith

At an afternoon wedding yesterday Miss Nanieta Antilotti, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Antilotti of Atlanta, Ga., became the bride of Calvin Wallace Smith, USNR, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Wallace Smith of Carbondale, Ill. The 3 o'clock ceremony took place at the New Hampshire Avenue home of Mrs. Grace Keller Cooper with Bramachari Jotin officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was gowned in white satin, fashioned with a V neckline, and long tight sleeves. Her finger-tip length veil was held to her hair by a coronet of pearls and she carried a white prayerbook, to which was pinned a white orchid and a shower of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Cooper was the maid of honor and wore gold satin crepe with a matching lace cap. Mrs. Patricia Collins of Atlanta, Ga., was the only attendant and wore blue lame. The flowers of both attendants were lavendar orchids.

John Stine, USNR, was the best man and the ushers were George Parezo and Gerald Gibson. There was a small reception following the ceremony.

When the couple left for their honeymoon to New York the bride was wearing grey-blue tailored wool with a sable jacket and brown accessories.

The bride is an attorney with the Department of Justice and Mr. Smith is an engineer at present serving as an instructor in the United States Navy.

'Just an Escapade'—Says Colonel Reitz of His Flying Visit to Washington From London

By Elizabeth Henney

"Just an escapade,—just a jaunt," said Colonel Deneys Reitz, High Commissioner in London for the Union of South Africa, as he dismissed with a wave of his hand the question of official implication in his sudden visit to Washington.

The man who gave "commando" to the world, went on to say that he had always wanted to visit Iceland (since his mother was Norwegian), that he had just decided to slip away on a trip, and had come the rest of the way to Canada with the bomber, and then by train down to Washington.

Large, stocky, ruddy-faced, with a twinkle in his eye, features that remind one strongly of Churchill, and a most completely frank manner of speaking, it was hard to believe that he might be drawing a skillful red herring across an official trail.

But a couple of reporters interviewing the Colonel yesterday at the South African Legation (just a few hours after his arrival in the Capital) were muttering gently to themselves.

"Why Pleasure-Jaunt Now"

"After all, what would Jan Smuts' right-hand man be doing on a pleasure junket right now, with Churchill away and South Africa's Prime Minister Smuts in virtual command of the British Empire?

"True, Colonel Reitz' remarks indicate that he believes that the collapse of Germany is just a question of time. Also he mentioned the fact that the Union of South Africa hoped that the United States would be able to assist in the postwar development of the vast resources of coal, iron and gold in South Africa. He did not mention whether or not he would see any American industrialists while here, with that development in view.

"And of course, maybe he's just here to see about raising the South African Legation to the status of an embassy. After all Canada now has an Embassy here. Your guess is as good as mine" they summed up as they turned back to their questioning of one of the most colorful personalities extant.

Was Commando in 1899

As to the word "Commando," which most people think is a coinage of this war, Colonel Reitz was a Commando in 1899, during the Boer War. And it was his book, "Commando," about that war, that became a best seller throughout Africa, in Britain and on the Continent, and brought the word and the type of fighting to the attention of the world. His book is now a text for the present British Commandos.

In South Africa, during the Boer War, to "go on Commando" meant to go on active duty as a guerilla trooper; and at the age of 16 Keneys Reitz (son of the former President of the Republic of the Orange Free State in South Africa) enlisted with the forces of General Smuts and took part in the famous Commando raids of the British Cape Province.

It was Deneys Reitz, the unreconstructed rebel, who went into voluntary exile in Madagascar at the end of the Boer War, rather than accept the peace terms of the British Empire. His father went as a voluntary exile to Texas, and came back to South Africa eight years later with a Texas drawl combined with his Dutch-Afrikaans accent.

"It's Good Enough for Me"

Young Deneys meanwhile, was making his living driving an ox-cart in Madagascar and brooding about the British. Finally, after some years, he got a letter from Mrs. Smuts, which said, "My husband is rebuilding this country with the aid of a very fair-minded British Empire. What's good enough for him is good enough for me and ought to be good enough for you."

Deneys Reitz decided it was, and came back to study and become a lawyer. Came 1914 and he enlisted in the army again, in South Africa, to fight with the British against Germany.

By 1917, he decided he wasn't getting enough action in Africa, so he went to England, enlisted as a private in the army, rose to be colonel of the Royal Scots Fusileers, was seriously wounded, but back in action in time to march his battalion into the Rhineland.

Wife Is Politician Too

That war polished off, he went back to South Africa, this time as editor of De Vriend des Volk, an Afrikaans newspaper in the Orange Free State. By 1920 Gen. Smuts, then Prime Minister of the country, had persuaded him to stand for Parliament and had broken all precedents by making him a cabinet minister.

Out of his second war came another best-selling book, this one called "Trekking On," and concerned mainly with his experiences in France. In the early 1930's his wife also became active politically and was the first woman member of Parliament in the union. (She is now head of the South African Voluntary Services in London for war aid to her countrymen.)

To sum up his personal dossier, he is one of 16 children and has two sons of his own in the present war. Michael, the youngest, is now 18 and is an air lieutenant flying a Spitfire in Italy. John, now 21 is a captain in an antiaircraft battery; "and" says their father "I haven't seen either of them in so long I can hardly recall their faces."

Quietly evading any further reference to his visit here, Colonel Reitz was both frank and fulsome in his answers to questions about the war or his homeland.

As to his homeland, he emphasized that the state of mind in the Union is extremely pro-British; that of course there are reactionaries, but that they are in the minority. That the Union has recognized the extreme fairness of the British in their dealings and feels that Britain protects rather than dominates their country. He added that Britain had kept a hands-off policy as to internal affairs, and reminded the reporters that since the last war, any one of the Commonwealth (the Union, Australia, Canada, etc.) could have withdrawn into complete freedom by popular vote, but preferred to remain within the protection of the Empire.

He added with vigor that the German radio had called them obsequious for staying within the Empire, but, said Colonel Reitz: "The South Africans are among the most independent people in the world. Down there every man is a leader or a 'Fuehrer' and when they like the British it's because they believe the British are fair."

On the subject of Germany, Colonel Reitz wouldn't go so far as to predict the end of the war, but he indicated the Allies have good reason to believe Germany is weakening; that photographs from the bombed areas show great devastation and that the problem of caring for millions of evacuees in other parts of Germany is telling on the strength, supplies and nerves of the rest of the population, and that rumblings of dissatisfaction within Germany are being heard in London.

Talks of Nazi Secret Weapon

He talked of Germany's promised "devastating secret-weapon," and said the British had heard a good deal about it, the rocket-bomb that is supposed to be shot into the stratosphere from France and come down over London. He said they knew heavily concreted emplacements had been built on the coast of France some time ago. Apparently irrelevantly he added that Germany would not dare to use gas because the Allies now had control of the air and of gas developments—and again left the reporters to draw their own conclusions.

$98,535 Approved For Nurse Training At Providence

The Federal Works Administration yesterday approved a $98,535 project for nurses' training facilities for Providence Hospital, according to Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, administrator.

The project provides for leasing and renovating existing buildings, including the purchase of movable equipment, to provide housing facilities for nurses, and the construction of a one-story and part-basement dining hall and kitchen on the south side of D st., between 3rd and 4th sts. se.

The project will provide training facilities and housing for 128 nurses, Fleming said.

Ciro...the gifts she dreams of

Lost in a cloud of enchanting scents, our lady ponders the one she may receive . . . So many tantalizing names to choose from, like the exciting "Danger," or the softly sweet "Surrender," or the more moody "Reflections" and "New Horizons." All speak of a beautiful dream-world of fragrances that will linger long after the thrill of Christmas.

THERE SHOULD BE NO TROUBLE—THE PLAN IS PERFECT, HERR BRINKER!
IT'S TWO O'CLOCK—THE CHIEF SENT ME TO RELIEVE YOU—
WHERE'S EDWARDS? I THOUGHT HE HAD THIS ASSIGNMENT—I'VE NEVER SEEN YOU BEFORE—
I'M A NEW MAN HERE—HERE'S MY BADGE—EDWARDS IS ON ANOTHER CASE—
WELL, YOU HAVE YOUR INSTRUCTIONS—NAZI AGENTS MAY TRY TO REACH SWENSON EVEN HERE!

SUPERMAN Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

CONVINCED THAT CLARK KENT IS SUPERMAN, LOIS LANE'S UNUSUAL LITTLE NIECE, SUSIE, HAS TAKEN UNUSUAL MEASURES TO PROVE HER POINT...
AND HAS JUST BEEN PROPERLY CHASTISED...
SUSIE, AREN'T YOU GOING TO ADMIT YOU'RE ASHAMED—PUSHING UNCLE CLARK OUT OF THE WINDOW TO FIND OUT IF HE WAS SUPERMAN?
I—I'M SORRY, AUNT LOIS...
"WELL, I'D BETTER GET OUT OF HERE BEFORE SUSIE DECIDES TO HIT ME OVER THE HEAD WITH AN AXE TO TEST HER THEORY!"
I'M SORRY, UNCLE CLARK!
"YOU'D BETTER BE!' WHY, IF IT HADN'T BEEN FOR THAT AWNING BREAKING HIS FALL, HE'D HAVE BEEN KILLED! HOW COULD YOU DO SUCH A THING, SUSIE?" IT'S BAD ENOUGH THAT YOU HAVE SUCH AN AWFUL HABIT OF TELLING FIBS—BUT THIS—"
I'M SORRY...
BUT I STILL THINK UNCLE CLARK IS SUPERMAN!

TERRY AND THE PIRATES Back to the Bush; This Is Big League Stuff By Milton Caniff

COL. CORKIN... PARATROOPS AWAY—BUT THE JAPS ARE BRINGING UP GROUND FORCES ON THE ROAD LEADING TO THE WRECK OF THE CHINA NATIONAL TRANSPORT...
OH, TERRY—I'M GLAD YOU'RE HERE—BUT IF THE JAPS FILTER THROUGH THE WOODS, THESE UNARMED CIVILIANS WILL BE HELPLESS...
HERE COME COL. CORKIN AND FLIGHT LT. BONNY DOWN FROM OUR COVER, GRETT!
YANKEE FIGHTERS!... LEAVE THE ROAD!
GIVE 'EM DITCH-ITCH, BONNY! YEE-IP!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY By Dale Allen

GYPSY MONEZ, A DANCER WITH A MYSTERIOUS PAST WHO IS HIDING OUT IN MARY'S HOME HAS JUST OVERHEARD SOME CAUSTIC COMMENTS BY TWO GOSSIPY LOCAL LADIES....!
PERHAPS YOUR HUSBAND WAS MISTAKEN, MRS. GUSHMOOR!
INDEED NOT, MRS. WORTH!
CYRIL IS AN AIR RAID WARDEN AND DURING THE BLACKOUT HE SAW THIS MONEZ CREATURE BEING FOUGHT OVER BY MAX FALCON AND SOME YOUNG MAN...!
I BEG YOUR PARDON..."LADIES!"..
BUT IF YOU TWO DELEGATES FROM THE STREET CLEANING DEPARTMENT WILL STOP BEATIN' YOUR GUMS FOR A MINUTE, MAYBE A GIRL CAN SALVAGE THE REMNANTS OF HER REPUTATION..!

MICKEY FINN Secret Mission! By Lank Leonard

UNCLE OWNEY HAS ANOTHER PLAN TO END PHIL'S GAMBLING!
OH, SURE! DO YOU WANT A RIDE HOME?
SO YOU CLEANED UP AGAIN TODAY, EH, PHIL?
NO THANKS, PHIL—I FEEL LIKE WALKING TONIGHT!
OKAY! SUIT YOURSELF!
IT'S FUNNY OWNEY DIDN'T WANT A LIFT HOME!
I THINK HE'S A LITTLE PEEVED BECAUSE HE'S LOST SO MANY BETS TO ME, DEVANNY! BUT I SHOULD WORRY ABOUT HIM!

MR. AND MRS. Much Ado About Dinner By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

WHAT MADE YOU SO LATE? I'VE BEEN WAITING FIFTEEN MINUTES
COULDN'T HELP IT. GOT DELAYED. WHAT'S ON THE MENU?
I ORDERED THE FIRST PART OF YOUR DINNER FOR YOU—FRUIT CUP AND CONSOMME WITH NOODLES
I WISH YOU'D LET ME DO MY OWN ORDERING
WELL, I ONLY ORDERED WHAT YOU LIKE
I KNOW, BUT I PREFER TO CHOOSE MY OWN EATS, IF IT'S ALL THE SAME TO YOU
THEN WHAT DO YOU WANT? THE GIRL IS WAITING
LET'S SEE. BRING ME THE FRUIT CUP AND THE CONSOMME WITH NOODLES

DIXIE DUGAN Bitterest Pill! By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

YOU MEAN ARTHUR OF COURSE.
FROM A HOPELESS CASE TO HEALTH—ALL BECAUSE YOU PROMISED TO MARRY HIM—YOU'RE A MIRACLE GIRL.
OH, PLEASE! HE KNEW I DIDN'T LOVE HIM ALL THE TIME.
BUT HE UNDERSTOOD EVERYTHING PERFECTLY WHEN I TOLD HIM
SO THAT'S WHY HE LEFT IN SUCH A HURRY
YOU DIDN'T THINK I WASN'T GOING TO, DID YOU?
IT WAS THE BITTEREST PILL I EVER GAVE TO A PATIENT, BUT HE TOOK IT LIKE A MAN—AND HE THINKS YOU'RE A BRICK!
HMMM—I WONDER—(SIGH)—OH WELL—

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED By Zane Grey

LEAVING PROFESSOR ZERO, WHILE HE QUESTIONS THE NEARBY CAMPER WHO ALSO DRESSES LIKE THE "GLOWING GHOST" BANDIT, KING RETURNS TO FIND HIS FRIEND HAS FLED!
THIS LOOKS LIKE AN ADMISSION OF GUILT! I TOLD PROFESSOR ZERO NOT TO BREAK CAMP.. BUT HE'S GONE!
THE PROFESSOR'S TOO SMART TO... OHHm!

IT'S A WISE CHILD WHO KNOWS WHAT DAD WANTS FOR CHRISTMAS

Manhattan SHIRTS

2.45

Generations of Americans have given and received gifts by Manhattan. It's a deep-rooted custom that goes back to Civil War days. This custom is just as firmly imbedded in the minds of children as well as men who ask for Manhattan. Top-flight tailoring has made Manhattan Shirts the smartest fitting shirts that one can buy. Creative color skill has done magical things to Manhattan Ties. The sports-wear is styled with authority . . . sweaters, sport shirts, casual and all-weather jackets. The pajamas are full-tailored, made for a tired man's comfort. The hand-kerchiefs, too, have the Manhattan feel and look. Give a quality Christmas gift by Manhattan again this year. It's an old and thoughtful custom!
